INVESTMENTS IN CHINA.

INTERESTING TALK WITH CIVIL ENGINEER JEFFORDS.

He is Perfecting Plans for the Longest Railroad in the Empire-fect That Should Follow Tour of Li Hung Chang.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—A movement is on foot among prominent clubmen of this city to extend an invitation to Li Hung Chang, the Chinese Viceroy, to have him stop over a couple of days in Chicago, while en route to the Pacific Coast. Col. M. R. Jeffords, C.E., of Shanghai, and an American promoter of railroads in China, has been in town the past two days, and he has helped along the movement. In conversation with a reporter last night, Col. Jeffords said:

fords said:

"I am returning now to perfect the plan for building the longest railroad in the empire. A year ago last June I left London for China for the purpose of investigating the needs and prospects for railroads there. I returned with the proliminary contract for constructing a line of railroad from Peking to Hankow, a distance of 700 miles. It will be built largely by foreign capital. Two-thirds of this has been contributed by the Chinese merchant companies, by the Chinese merchant companies, and the other third was largely from America. The construction of the rail-road will require a capital of 30,000,000 taels. A tael is worth about 72 cents in American money.

"China has at present only 182 miles of railroad owned and operated by the imperial government. I am now returning to inspect the papers in the edictrom the Emperor allowing the construction of the road, to see that it conforms to the requirements of the investment of Anglo-American capital.

forms to the requirements of the investment of Anglo-American capital. Americans up to the present time have been more backward about investing in China than other capitalists, and have made no effort to send agents there to investigate. But this is changing. "The trip of Li Hung Chang through Europe and America will result in the rapid development of railroad systems in China. He is a man of great intelligence, and appreciates the wonderful advantages to be gained through modern methods of transportation. Shen Tao Tai is at present the general manager of railways and of the development of the present the general manager of railways and of the development.

modern methods of transportation. Shen Tao Tai is at present the general manager of railways and of the development of the mines and other industries in China. He is not only a warm personal friend of Li Hung Chang, but is his partner in the Chinese Merchant Company and other great enterprises." All stories of Li Hung Chang's deposition from power in China are false. He is the greatest man in the empire next to the Emperor, and the mission to St. Petersburgh was, the greatest honor that could be conferred upon any subject of the empire. The Chinese Viceroy will pass through Chicago September 6 or 7 with his thirty-eight ministers, mandarins and many other men of smaller greatness, on his way to the Pacific Coast. He will first be entertained in New York, where President Cleveland, ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster and a committee will receive him. From there he goes to Philadelphia to be the guest of ex-Minister John Russell Young and other gentlemen of that city at the Union League Club. After that he goes to Washington.

"According to many persons, a large responsibility lies with the consuls, who are accused of over-zealous actions and of encouraging both sides to persist in their present attitude. In the opinion of these persons the solution of the Cretan question lies in the withdrawal of all the consuls. They predict that the effect would be instantaneous. They probably want to retire into the mountains and fight."

BUZZARD'S BAY (Mass.,) Aug. 18.—Atty.-Gen. Harmon was at Gray Gables yesterday and left on the late rain last night. While here, he met Secretaries Carlisle, Olney, and La-mont, these four members of the Cabinet being at Buzzard's Bay at the same time.
There is no doubt some important matters were discussed, notwith-standing the statement that the visit here of so many Cabinet ministers at this particular time is purely of a social character. There are several re-ports in circulation of what passed at the meeting, one being the advisability of issuing a statement with relation to the third party, and that Secretary Smith's position was also considered. Spain's alleged claim for damages is also thought to have been considered. The fact that Calderon Carlisle sent a printed copy of his brief to ev-ery leading government official in ery leading government official in Washington, may have caused complaint. His brief was prepared at the direction of a Spanish minister. It is said to be practically a direct attack on the administration on the part of the Spanish minister under cover of the attorney's brief. Should Cleveland take offense, Minister Dupuy de Lome might find himself suddenly persona non grata.

The Executive Committee will listen to no proposition looking to the withdrawal of Watson from the ticket. Butler said that if Sewall had stood for what Bryan does before the people neither holding the Populist party organization together or anything else would have prevented the nomination of the whole Democratic ticket by the Populists. Sewall does not represent the Populists, he says, and under no circumstances will they consent to vote for him. Josephus Daniels, member of the Democratic National Committee from North Carolina, is in the city to see if an arrangement could be made among the party leaders to bring about an adjustment of the difficulties in that State. Daniels had a conference with Senator Jones and Jones and Butler then conferred. It was evident Daniels felt the Democratic situation not very promising. Butler was seemingly satisfied with the situation. "We can give eleven electoral vôtes to Watson," he said, "without mentioning what else might be done." One of the Democratic leaders spoke very positively about the matter. He said that if Butler thought he had the Democratis in a tight place and could drive a hard bargain, he would find that they would make a straight fight. They did not propose to be buildozed into giving up anything.

OMAHA, Aug. 18.—Eugene V. Debs has written under date of August 6 a letter to George P. Garrison of Chadron, Nev. setting forth his views on silver and fusion between the Demo-

"Without the support of the Popul crats and the Populists. Debs says:

"Without the support of the Populists, the Democratic party could not win. Mr. Sewall can well afford to step aside to effect a union of two great forces and insure the election of the people's candidates. Such action on the part of Sewall would make him a far greater man than to be Vice-President. Failing to accord the People's party such recognition by giving them a place on the national ticket, there will be dissatisfaction which may culminate in open revolt, especially in the Southern States, where the Populists suffered all sorts of indignities at the hands of Bourbon Democrats, and this may cost Bryan his election and put McKinley and goldbugism in power.

"There is a vast difference between Bryan and the Democratic party. If the latter's only ambition is to swallow the People's party so as to place itself in power and get possession of offices, their design will and should be thwarted. I would far rather see Mc-

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIPE)

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, (N. Y.,) Aug. 18.-The second notable demonstration in the political cam-paign in New York City was held tonight, under the auspices of the Democratic Honest-money League of Amer-ica, in Madison Square Garden, where Hon. W. Bourke Cockran addressed an immense audience with a speech entitled, "In opposition to repudia-tion."

Cockran had been selected to answer Candidate Bryan's speech be-cause of his reputation as an orator. An afternoon shower had cooled the air and made the night an ideal one, in pleasant contrast to the sweltering atmosphere which oppressed the Bryan shouters. At 6 o'clock the doors were opened, two and a half hours be-fore the meeting was to begin, and as the people filed in it was noticeable that ladies composed a large proporthe people filed in it that ladies composed a large proportion of the crowd. Among them were Charles S. Fair-child and William D. Trenholm, officers of the first Cleveland administration: Congressman John Cowen of tion; Congressman John Cowen of Baltimore, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Raliroad; ex-Gov. Eighteen thousand seats had been placed in the garden, and all of them were filled when Cochran advanced to the front of the platform and was greeted by a tremendous cheer, men climbing upon their seats, and waving little American flags which had been strewn through the hail. Three-hearty cheers were given for McKinley, and there were some hisses. Then a gallery god yelled, "What's the matter with Bryan?"

J. John Bryne, the president of the league, called the meeting to order and addressed his hearers as "Democrats who love their country above party," exhorting them to save that party from exhorting them to save that party from repudiation, anarchy and socialism, and then presented Hon. Perry Belmont, who made a short speech by way of overture to Cockran's effort. There was a second outburst of cheering when Cockran was introduced. It lasted several minutes, and while it was in progress sixty singers chosen from among the city's banks and entitled "The Banks' Glee Club," sang the "Star Spaning the chorus with thunderous effect. Cockran's words rolled to the further ends of the hall. Frequent outbreaks of cheers followed his periods. He said in part:

Although the parties most interested have shown a desire for a quiet and unostentatious wedding, the indications are that their friends are going to make it one of, if not the most; brilliant of affairs of the year. Cornelius Vanderbilt, although he has not yet recovered entirely from his recent illness, will be present at the wedding and give his daughter away. The bridesmaids will be Miss Emily Vanderbilt Sloan, Miss Lelia Sloan, Miss Shepard, Miss Gerry and Miss Taylor. Miss Vanderbilt is at Newport. Mr. Whitney is also there on a visit to his sister, Mrs. Almeric Hugh Paget.

Wonderful stories are told of gifts that will be received on her wedding day. More than $150,000 worth of jewelry intended for her came in on the Gascogne from Paris Sunday. Among other things there was a superb diamond necklace, a tiara, a diamond aigrette, and a dlamond-and-ruby-studeded dog collar for Miss Vanderbilt's pet poodle.

These are all supposed to be gifts from her father. We must oppose the nominee of the Chicago convention, and we know full well that the success of our opposition will mean our exclusion from public life, but we will be contented and gratified by the reflection that it will prove that the American people cannot be divided into parties on a question of simple morals or of commonnenty.

"We look in vain through the speech We look in vain through the speech delivered here one week ago, to find a true statement of the issue involved in this canvass. Indeed, I believe it is doubtful if the candidate himself quite understands the nature of the faith which he professes. I say this not in criticism of his ability, but in justice to his morality. I believe that if he himself understood the inevitable consequences of the doctrines which he preaches, that his own hands would be the very first to tear down the platform on which he stands.

"We all must remember that lurid rhetoric, which glowed as fiercely in the western skies as the sunlight which through the past week foretold the torrid heat of the ensuing day, and here upon this platform we find that same rhetoric as mild, as insipld, as the waters of a stagnant pool. He is a candidate who was swept into the nomination by a, wave of popular enthusiasm, awakened by appeals to prejudice and greed. He is a candidate, who, declaring that this was a revolutionary movement, no sooner found himself face to face with the American feeling that movement, no sooner found himself face to face with the American feeling, than he realized that this soil is not propitious to the raising of revolution; that the people of this country will not change the institutions which have stood the tests and experiences of a century for institutions based upon the fantastic dreams of a Populist agitator; that the American nation will never consent to substitute for the republic of Washington, of Jefferson and of Jackson, the republic of an Altgeld, a Tillman or a Bryan.

"Whatever change may have come over his manner as a candidate, however much the vehemence of his eloquence may have been reduced, two things for which he stands remain unaltered. In this platform he defended the most revolutionary plank of the Chiago convention, in speeches less vehement, but not less earnest, than that in which he supported their adoption. On this platform he defended the Populistic programme of overthrowing the integrity of the Supreme Court. If there be any fruit which has grown for the benefit of all mankind out of the establishment of our republic, it has been the demonstration that it is possible by the organization of an independent tribunal to safeguard the rights of every citizen, and protect those natural privileges against any invasion from whatever source, or however powerful might be the antagonizing element."

Continuing, Cockran said:

"If Mr. Bryan could show me that by any means known to heaven or on earth wages could be increased by the free coinage of silver, I will be ready to support him, because I know of no test of prosperity absolutely infailible except the rate of wages paid laborers. When we come to find how Mr. Bryan expects to increase the wages of labor we find ourselves lost in a maze of contradiction. No man can tell how or where or when the wages of the workingman are to be increased; but anyone who examines the scheme can see that the inevitable tendency, the inevitable consequence of a debasement in the standard of value must be a reduction in the rate of wages, and that is the consequence of workingman are to be increased; but anyone who examines the scheme can see that the inevitable consequence of a depasement in the standard of value must be a reduction in the rate of wages, and that is the consequence of wages, and that is the consequence of the wants to cheapen the dollar; that he wants to cheapen the dollar; that he spiracy in which the Populist is engaged.

"Now, Mr. Bryan tells us that he wants to cheapen the dollar; that he wants to cheapen the dollar; that he wants to increase the volume of money. I do not believe that any man who ever lived could quite understand a Populist's notion of what money is, further than that he believes it is a desirable thing to get, and he is not very particular about the means by which he can get his hands on it.

"Nothing is more common than the mistake that money and property are identical. They are not. There may be a very large volume of circulating medium and very great poverty. The issue of paper money simply is no more an increase of wealth than the issue by an individual of his promissory note would show an increase of his property. As a matter of fact, an increase in the coinage is no proof of an increase in property, but may be a strong proof of a decrease in wealth. It is not the volume of money, but the activity of money that counts.

"The basis of sound trade is sound money—money which is intrinsically valuable, money, which like the gold coinage of this country, the governments of this cannot affect if it tried to. I can take a ten-dollar gold piece and I can dety all the power of all the governments of this earth to take 5 cents of its value from it. Having earned it by the exercise of my brain, having earned it by the exercise of my brain, having earned it by the exercise of this country, the honest masses of the laborer when he earns it, and that no power on earth shall cheat him of the sweat of his brow.

"Now, the Populist loves to say that the creditor is a person who oppresses the western farmer; the creditors of the

of his brow.

"Now, the Populist loves to say that the creditor is a person who oppresses the western farmer; the creditors of this country are not the bankers; they are not the so-called capitalists; they are the laborers, and it is at the expense of labor that this change is made. The laborer is always a creditor for at least one day's work. When any man can show me a laborer who has been paid in advance for a day's work I will in advance for a day's work, I will show him a laborer who is a debtor. The laborer by the very law of his being a creditor for at least one day's work is generally a creditor for a week's work or two weeks' work. Every great industrial enterprise has for its chief creditors its laborers."

OF THE TIMES' SPECIAL WIRE NEW YORK, Aug. 18 .- (Special Dispatch.) John Montgomery, a veteran of the civil war, who came to this city on a visit from the Old Soldiers' Home at Santa Monica, fell among the Philistines of the Bowery last night.

Montgomery had about $90 of his pension money in his inside pocket when he started to see the sights. In a saloon on the Bowery, he made the acquaintance of two men, one of whom was Thomas Wallace of the Bowery. After several rounds of drinks, for which Montgomery paid, the old man said he was going to his hotel and the two men volunteered to accompany At Catherine and Henry streets, Montgomery alleges, the men serred him by the throat and began to choke

Wallace admitted that he was drinking with Montgomery, but denied that he robbed him, and declared that the other man robbed Montgomery and was a perfect stranger to him. The police are looking for him. Wallace was held for trial.

UPPER RED HOOK (N. Y.,) Aug. 18.—William J. Bryan, for the first time since Senator John M. Thurston, as alleged, declared that he (Bryan,) was in the employ of mine-owners, has made an official denial, coupled with a challenge to the National Re-publican Committee to come out in the open and accuse him or forever be silent. Bryan's attention had been called to the controversy between Senators Thurston and Stewart, and he determined tonight to settle the matter if possible. He therefore demands an open charge which, he says, he will refute with details of his pri-vate life and his financial affairs, or silence. He said tonight:

"I have already denied this charge on several occasions, but the reitera-tion of it by Senator Thurston, a distinguished resident of my own State, justifies me in answering it again. I have never at any time or under any circumstances been in the employ of any mine-owners, individually or col-lectively, directly or indirectly; nor have I ever been in the employ of, or paid by any bimetallic league or as-

paid by any bimetallic league or association.

"Aside from my editorial salary of about $150 per month, paid by the Omaha World-Herald, and a small amount derived from the legal profession, my income since my retirement from Congress has been derived entirely from lectures before Chautauqua, lyceum and lecture bureaus, which have usually paid me a fixed sum, and from contributions made by the people of localities where I have spoken. In some instances I have received nothing at all. In most cases I have received more than enough to pay traveling expenses. In only two instances, I think, has my conpensation exceeded $100, and in these instances it was about $200 at one place and about $300 at the other.

"The first platform on which I ran for Congress in 1890, before I was known politically outside of my State, contained a free-coinage plank, and my Republican opponent that year was an advocate of free silver. In the campaign of 1892 I again ran on a free-coinage platform. In 1894 I again ran on a free-coinage platform, and my opponent for the Senate, Mr. Thurston, while opposing unlimited coinage at 16 to 1, insisted that he favored bimetallism. I wrote—the free-coinage plank on which I ran in 1890, and the

I only mention this to show that my advocacy of free silver is not of recent date.

"Having made this answer to Mr. Thurston's letter, I shall hereafter take no notice of individual newspaper comment on the subject. If the Republican National Committee will say officially that I have ever been employed to deliver speeches by any mine-owner, a group of mine-owners or by any association supported by mine-owners, I am ready to make a statement showing in detail all money received by me for speech-making."

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(Special Dispatch.) Senator Thurston of Nebraska came to Chicago from the West today. Visiting Republican headquarters, he let loose a cyclonic amount of encourconditions are altogether favorable for a Republican victory. I have spoken in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Kansas, and in those States I have come in contact with all the leading Republicans of each State, and they confidently expect to carry one and all of them. But I am free to say that a vigorous campaign must be kept up until election day to accomplish what we hope and confidently expect."

Senator Thurston's attention was in yited to Senator Stewart's last letter,
"Yes, yes," replied Senator Thurston, "I have read his letter. Mr.
Stewart seems to have reached that state of political childhood—or shall I say senility?—where he gives way to

I made a frank and clear statement to the effect that I had simply read, while on the stump, an editoral of the Chicago. an editorial of the Chicago Chronicl of July 11, in which it was specifically charged that Bryan had been working for the silver syndicate on a salary. So I simply asked Bryan in behalf of an interested public to answer whether the charge was false or true.

"The charge is old in Nebraska. It has been current for two years, at least, and has never been denied or explained in any way by the Democratic candidate. Bryan is the only who can answer it. He has sai he will make answer in due time, but he ought to have been able to say 'yes' or 'no' without delay or hesita-

"The People's party ticket as named at St. Louis," he replied, "is Bryan and Watson, and that will be the People's party ticket until the polls close in November. Mr. Bryan is as much our candidate as Mr. Watson, and so as this committee has the power it will strive just as hard to elect one as the other and will leave nothing ir its power undone to help either of both, but it will not help one candi both, but it will not help one candidate at the expense of the other."

A writer in the Boston Transcript says: "A friend of Mrs. Stowe tells a quaint, pathetic little anecdote of later date than most of the reminiscences her going has called forth. A welcome guest always at the home near what was the home of her later years, it was sometimes her wont to wander, at twilight, from her own into some neighboring garden, and thence through the hospitable open door into hall or living-room.

In the hall of one such house was a fine bust of Henry Ward Beecher in white marble, resting in a deep niche in the wainscoted wall, and near it a softly-shaded light. One summer twilight, when this light had been newly kindled, Mrs. Stowe came absently in through the open door and stood looking up at the bust. 'Ah. Henry!' they heard her murmur, in her cuiet, dreamful way; 'Ah, Henry, the light burns before you there like a saint in your shrine! But—you were no saint, Henry! You were no saint!"

Band of Seventy Yaquis is Utterly Broken Up.

United States Cavalrymen Said to Have Done It.

lembers of the Posse Hunting the Nogales Bank Robbers Disappear. Charges Against Winthrop to Be Pressed Misuse of Government

(BY THE TIMES' SPECIAL WIRE.) TUCSON (Ariz.,) Aug. 18.—(Special Dispatch.) A courier has arrived from Olive Camp, reporting a battle last night on one of the peaks of the Sigras, twenty miles from here, between Troop E. Seventh Cavalry, of Fort Grant, Capt. Bullock in charge, and the main body of the escaped revolutionists who attacked the Nogales custom-house. The revolutionists were captured after three had been killed. Three soldiers were wounded. One of them, Private Ellinghurst, was shot twice in the right breast, and will die. The trail was taken from the line and followed through.

The revolutionists were all Yaquis, dressed in their picturesque garb of white mantas. They were heavily armed, all with 45-70 Winchesters, and had several cases of ammunition. Among the guns was the silver-mounted rifle taken from the body of the Nogales Chief of Police. One of the guns had twenty-one pins in the stock, signifying that number of men killed by the owner. The men were all mounted, and had two wagon loads of supplies. With them were three squaws. They traveled so as to be in the mounmostly, thus overlooking their pursuers.

The trail was hard to follow, and was purposely split frequently. Last night, at 5 o'clock, the wagons were found at the foot of an abrupt peak, snugly hidden behind the rocks. the top were the Yaquis. They soon opened fire in a vicious manner. The troops dismounted and surrounded the peak. Both sides fired when an oppor-tunity for shots came. The soldiers were the better marksmen. Three revolutionists were killed. The soldiers wounded were sentinels posted at an exposed spot. About twenty-five shots were fired on each side.

Firing continued for three hours, and night came on. The Yaquis found themselves surrounded and outnumbered they being twenty-three to thirty-nine of the soldiers. To have made a dash for liberty would have been the abandonment of their supplies, and exter-mination. Finally, at 8 o'clock, they an-nounced a surrender. The soldiers were surprised at the completeness of the arms of the revolutionists. Besid the finest of guns, they had good re-volvers and knives, and an abundance of supplies. The bodies were left stark and staring, and will not be buried. Should Ellinghurst die before Tucson is reached, he will be buried on the spot The revolutionists will be brought here and turned over to United States Marshal Meade. They are due here tomorrow at 1 o'clock. The civil au-thorities will take them to the United States Commissioner for examination and they will doubtless be held for th grand jury. The Marshal will then no-tify the State Department at Washington and the Secretary will use his discretion as to turning them over to Mexico. Some of the revolutionists have lived in Arizona, and will doubt-less claim United States citizenship. In such an event, there is no precedent for turning them over to Mexico. All are liable for treason in the United States in having taken up arms against a friendly power. Should they be turned over to Mexico, their trial

Seven were killed at the battle at Nogales, and two soon after; three were captured Saturday at Tubac and yesterday twenty-three were captured or killed. The whole band comprised about seventy men. Since the arrival of a sergeant here, the story has been denied by the courier, Beeber, but this is thought to be only because the military do not want the report to go out prematurely. ANOTHER ACCOUNT. TUCSON, (Ariz.,) Aug. 18.—(By Associated Press.) The fight lasted from 5:30 o'clock until 8:30 o'clock. The troops charged them in their stronghold, killing three and capturing the entire band of thirty, among whom were three squaws. Three soldiers were wounded, one mortally, and three Yaquis were killed. The Yaquies were armed with Winchesters, pistols, and knives, and were better armed than the military. They will be brought here tomorrow and be turned over to the civil authorities. the civil authorities.

It is thought they struck either the trail of a part of the gang that ambushed Leatherwood and posse on the 12th inst., and are still following it, or that all have been killed. If not heard of in a few days, King's brother will leave to look for them. The country through which King and

FEVERISH NOGALES. NOGALES (Ariz.) Aug. 18.—Excitement is again at fever heat in Nogales this evening, caused by the receipt of the following special telegram to the Dally Border Vidette, dated at Tucson this afformer. this afternoon:

Olive is a mining camp, situated about twenty-five miles in a south-easterly direction from Tucson and about forty miles west of Greaterville and sixty miles northwesterily from Nogales. It is not very far from Tubac, where a party of nineteen insurrectionists started for Nogales on the day preceding the attack. The surrounding country is largely inhabited by Yaqui Indians and Mestizos half-breeds.

The case was continued to await the arrival of the United States District Attorney. Two of the four are Luis Lizo and José Salcido, whose names appear on the original list of nineteen taken from the dead body of the insurrectionist immediately after the fight Wednesday morning.

Brough sailed from New York, August 17, 1895. He was accompanied on his start by his brother-in-law, Cyrus Forsyth of Black Creek, Can.

The two landed at Queenstown, Ireland, and while on a tour of the island Forsyth fell from his blcycle and received a compound fracture of the arm. His companion proceeded alone. He visited Scotland, North and South Wales and many places in England. this town, aged 45 years, has returned Wales and many places in England. From London he went by water to Dieppe, in France, then wheeling to Holland and Germany.

In Frankfort he won a fifth-of-amile bicycle race, and with it a prize of $100. In Italy he rode his wheel from Rome to Naples. At Constantinople he was in prison for three nights and two days for being without a passport. Later he went to Sicily. From Sicily he went to Egypt. Later he found himself in Arabia and the made his way via Bombay to Calcutta. From the latter city he made journey to the Straits Settlements. Then to Rangoon, then to Burmah and on to China. The New English Bronze Coins.

(From London:) The deputy master of the mint refers in his newly-issued report to the public comments upon the disappearance of the ship and the lighthouse from the new side of bronze coins on which the figure of Britannia appears. It is pointed out that one effect of the change is that the whole imperial coinage now bears an identical effigy of the Queen and an identical legend. While the figure of Britannia first appears on the English copper coinage in the reign of Charles II (the original model being, it is said, the King's mistress, who afterward became Duchess of Richmond.) the trident and three-mast ship were not introduced until the time of George III, and in the reign of George IV. Britannia was given a helmet and a shield. In 1869 the lighthouse was added, and the ship and sea, which had disappeared in the start of George IV were reighted and nighthouse was added, and the simplifies sea, which had disappeared in the reign of George IV, were reintroduced. The deputy master of the mint explains that the design now adopted for plains that the design now adopted for the reverse, which was prepared by Mr. de Saulles, engraver of the mint, shows Britannia firmly grasping her trident with one hand, and with the other her shield, which is larger and more shapely than that in the olden design, where it very much resembles a cartwheel. This figure displays greater strength, and its pose is more dignified. The old-fashioned sailing vessel has again disappeared, as has also the lighthouse. The ship appeared in 1797 for the first time, and, removed in the reign of George IV, did not appear again until the bronze coinage of 1860, when the lighthouse was added for the first time.

Why He is so Much Liked.

(New York Tribune:) "Madam" tells of a recent act of kindness done by the Prince of Wales. "During his recent visit to Cardiff," it says, "the Prince stopped to look at a linotype machine at the exhibition, and the operator was not at his post. When found, he was discharged on the spot. The man afterward wrote to the Prince saying that he did not mind being discharged, but was greatly distressed at having caused His Royal Highness disappointment. On hearing of this the Prince at once wrote to the Mayor of Cardiff, who is also Lord Windsor, and asked him to see the proprietors of the machine and express His Royal Highness' hope that the man might be reinstated. Lord Windsor conveyed the royal wishes to the managing director, with the result that the man is now back at work. And it is just by such little acts of genuine humanity that the Prince has endeared himself to all, and made us think of him as a really good fellow as well as our future ruler."

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat:) A United States historian says that "the first coins struck by the United States Mint were some half-dimes, in 1792; the first dimes were struck in France from old silver family plate furnished by Washington, the coins being known as Martha Washington dimes, from an adaptation of the liberty head to that of Martha Washington."

One of the successful features of the week will be the boys' information brigade, an organization having been perfected among the high-school boys to patrol the city and give information and directions to visitors, two boys being stationed at each street corner, their marked white caps notifying the veterans that any needed help is to be free of charge.

The Loyal Legion has secured quarters in the Ryan Hotel, and will keep open house to their companions and friends. The Kittson mansion on Summit avenue has been fitted up as headquarters for the ladies,, and there will be held numerous receptions to the ladies of the various auxiliary societies and their friends. The general Grand Army reception will have the ladies' headquarters building for a center, and will extend for half a mile along Summit avenue, with numerous stations decorated for the occasion. There are fine Japanese scenes on the paper, and others in brown are just below them on the sticks, which are close enough together to warrant the decoration. You can bend these fans any way you like, and they will not break. This is the Mandarin fan. The dark-colored bamboo gold-splashed paper and numerous sticks mark the Mandarin. Here is one of the original Chinese fans, showing unexcelled figure work and many Chinese characters. The folds are wider and the sticks fewer. The kingdom went steadily into decay year after year, and the old man became more indolent and more fatuous, while none of his sons seems to have been allowed to take up the reins and save the country. "Egypt is desolated and abandoned to invasion from all lands; the barbarians overrun its frontier, the revolters invade it dally, every country is pillaging its cities, raiding its dwellings in the fields, and on the river. They abide and settle there for days and months, seated in the land; they reach the hills of middle Egypt.

come to Egypt to find provision to their mouths."

Such is the melancholy picture drawn come to Egypt to find provision for their mouths."

Such is the melancholy picture drawn by Merenptah of the state of the country on his accession—a striking contrast to the work of the really great kings of Egypt, of the Amenhotep and Thothmes line, who had handed on the rule of Syria from father to son unbroken. The continuous record that we have of Thothmes III shows that every year regularly he went through Syria to receive tribute and maintain his power, taking all the young princes to be educated in Egypt before they came to act as vassals in their own country. Until he was over 50 this annual outing was kept up, and his children to the third and fourth generations received this dominion in peaceful succession. But under Rameses all this stability had vanished; a few raids which did not cover half the previous conquests of Syria, a treaty on equal terms with the foe, and the boastful King sunk into an inglorious letharcy, in which even Egypt itself was largely given up to the foreigners.

And this decay was what had eaten into the soul of Merenptah during all his youth and vigor; until he was at least 40 nothing could be done by him. It was not until the old king had come to that condition which we can now see before our eyes in the Cairo Museum,—a withered mummy, which seems as if it still dwelt in and half alive with the spirit of insensate pride—it was not until this evil genius of the land was in his tomb that a stroke could be struck for the freedom of the country.

They began careful preparation. For four years Merenptah was consolidating his power, with apparently one expedition to Syria, up the coast to the plain of Esdraelon and Tyre; this reconquest we have learned of only since finding the new tablet. But it did not do more than secure the principal fortresses near the coast, and command the corn districts of Philis-since finding the new tablet. But it did not do more than secure the principal fortresses near the coast, and command the corn districts of Philistia and Esdraelon, which were cultivated by the people of Israel, among others. It is evident that reorganization had been going on, strengthening the resistance of the country, by the vigor with which the great Libyan invasion was repelled, after the country had been long submitting to minorattacks.

At the end of March in his fifth year Merenptah had a dream. Ptah, the great god of Memphis, appeared to him, and warned him to be ready a fortnight hence. Ptah, the great god of Memphis, appeared to him, and warned him to be ready a fortnight hence. This is doubtless a priestly way of putting some warnings from sples or travelers who reported the preparations in progress. Then, early in April, the great tempest or foreign invasion burst in from the west, coming just when all the harvests were gathered in, the fields stripped bare, the whole land naked and open, and canals dried up; in short, just when the greatest facilities existed for invasion, and the full graneries tempted the desert peoples. The warning had been in vain. Merenptah was prepared, and attacked the assembled host with his cavalry; the gods fought with them, and for one long afternoon, from midday till dark, they slew, and slew, and slew, for six hours slaughtering the multitude. The defeat was utter. The king, Maury, son of Dad, escaped, thanks to the darkness; but he did not even secure a horse or provisions, and fled from the fight on foot, completely terrified. Canalgre.

The Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Arizona, located at Tucson, is now distributing another bulletin under the above title, in which are set forth further facts respecting this new and important industry. It is a pamplet of thirty-five pages, and contains a half dozen reproductions of photographs of canalgre plants and roots, showing faithfully the habit of growth and character of the roots. Prof. Robert H. Forbes, the chemist of the station, is the author of the bulletin, which deals more particularly with the chemical side of the question, although some space is given to botanical description, habitat, and cultural methods. All who are interested in this important plant will want this new bulletin, which will be sent gratis to all applicants applying to the director of the station, as above.

THE FUTURE OF CANAIGRE. are set forth further facts respecting

THE FUTURE OF CANAIGRE As to whether canalgre is to become an important crop of the arid Southwest, Prof. Forbes, of the Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station, seems to have little doubt. In bulletin No. 21 of that station, just issued, he says:

"Certain peculiarities of canalgre seem favorable to its agricultural future:

"First—It grows in winter, when water is more abundant throughout the arid region. This fact may render possible the reclamation of large tracts of land, for which there is not sufficient irrigation in summer.

"Second—The climate is mild in this season of the year and labor is therefore more comfortable and effective.
"Third—In case of extreme drouth the crop is not lost, but the plant simply stops growth and waits for better conditions.

conditions.

"Fourth—Harvesting may occur at any time, the mature crop remaining in the ground indefinitely without injury, and even with a certain amount of improvement.

of improvement.

"As to the value of the product, it appears that under existing conditions the objective point is a crop which can be sold at from $5 to $7 a ton."

THE PLANT DESCRIBED.

In bulletin No. 21, just issued by the Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station, appears the following description of canaigre:
"Canaigre is chiefly remarkable for

HARD HEARTED PHARAOH

CONDITION OF HIS KINGDOM ON HIS ACCESSION.

"Egypt is Desolated and Abandoned to Invasion from all Lands" Was the Picture He Drew—Building Up His Power.

Prof. Flinders Petrie contributes to the Century for August an account of his discovery of a tablet which gives the first historic account of the first historic account of the Sian Of the Children of Israel. Concerning the character of "Pharaoh of the Ward Heart," Prof. Petrie writes as follows: A melancholy prospect he had seen as he grew up. His father look of the choic consisting of the proportions of the root, consisting of the portions of the root, consisting of the portions of the root, consisting of the conditions of growth from almost globular to long and selnder forms. Outside of the tubers the root system is not extensive, being distinctly smaller than that of beets or potatoes. In weight the roots range from a fraction of an ounce to two pounds. Externally, the young roots are light in color, changing to brown, reddish brown or almost black with age. They live several years, usually five or more, but show very little new growth after about the third season. The root increases after the manner of all exogenous stems by adding a layer of new tissue to the heart from without and to the bark from without and to the growing season this white sone of new growth may always be found in living roots between bark and heart, and, since the tissues tend to deepen head hear and profit of the root, consisting of the portions of the root, consisting of the portions of the root, consisting of the season.

the growing season this white zone of new growth may always be found in living roots between bark and heart, and, since the tissues tend to deepen in color from year to, year, the older portions of the root, consisting of the inner heart and the outside layers of bark, usually possess much more coloring matter. Oftentimes the gradations of color in successive rings of growth are so sharply marked that the age of a root is roughly shown by its cross section.

"The brittle, heavy bark, often a quarter of an inch in thickness, is externally quite smooth in young roots, with occasional scars marking the points of attachment of smaller root-lets during the period of growth. The old roots are rougher, often shaggy and deeply cracked as the result of rapid growth. The growing buds are at the crown of the root and are sometimes also borne on the fleshy base of the stems, which occasionally do not die, but persist, seemingly, in order to bring the buds nearer to the surface when the roots have been too deeply buried. In young roots the buds are conspicuous and prompt to grow, but small and sluggish in old ones.

"The roots, usually erect in position, appear normally at less than one foot below the surface. The root clusters, containing tubers of every size and age, vary much in arrangement. Roughly speaking, the new roots surround the mother tubers and, continuing in that direction, make a chain of roots connected at their crowns and in which the old growth is centrally placed. Oftentimes the new roots happen to form on one side of the mother tuber and, continuing in that direction, make a chain of roots connected at their crowns and in which the old growth is at one end, the new at the other. Increasing in this manner, the number of living roots in a single colony is sometimes very large. A thrifty hill dug in a sandy wash near Tucson recently yielded ninety-one roots, weighing about eight pounds, while a cultivated hill three years old, from Phoenix, gave eighty-seven roots weighing 17.5 pounds.

"The seeds, especially in arid situations, are largely infertile. In this section wild seedlings have not been observed, though said to be common in certain moist localities of New Mexico and California. In one trial of mixed wild and cultivated seed, two years old, sown in drills one-half inch deep, 9 per cent. came up. In nature canaigre is spread by occasional seed germination and by accidental scattering of roots, but it is maintained in places by its peculiar root system."

This bulletin is sent free to all applying to the director of the station at Tucson, Ariz.

WHERE WILL CANAIGRE GROW.

WHERE WILL CANAIGRE GROW The following extract from Bulletin No. 21 of the Arizona Experiment Staby many as to whether canaigre may The sprouting of the roots in August under the influence of rain suggests that in the culture of canalgre one or two summer irrigations would prepare the plant to grow more promptly or advent of cool weather. "The growing plant will stand a good deal of cold. When frosted the leaves deal of cold. When frosted the leaves lie prostrate upon the ground, but immediately regain position when thawed out by the sun. The root also will endure freezing. It has been left in the ground all winter sixty miles north of New York City, subjected to a temperature as low as 15 deg. below zero, without injury. At Lincoln, Neb., the roots stood a very severe winter without any damage whatever. At Peoria, Ill., plantings made in 1892 were still alive in 1895, and similar results are noted at Washington, D. C., and Garden City, Kan. The new root development, however, is stated in a number of cases to be insignificant under such conditions.

As to locality, canaigre is found more commonly in sandy washes where water is more abundant. With irrigation it will make a good growth in any fertile, tillable ground, but the influence of soil conditions on actual production has been little studied. It seems to stand considerable alkali and its event reported in the pate.

It was found that the average increase of tanning materials from year to year in ten instances was 1.64 per cent. (in water free material.) In one set of cultivated samples the averages of the first and second years' roots differed 2.64 per cent. This indicates a small but constant increase in the per cent. of tannin materials from year to year, but holds true only so long as the roots retain their vitality. When they die the tanning substances quickly disappear. Although the percentage does not increase remarkably from year to year, the roots themselves become larger, so that the actual amount of tanning materials is much greater." In Bulletin 21 of the Arizona Station Prof. Forbes says: "As regards the value of canaigre tanning materials, the earlier favorable opinions of tanning chemists have been excellently supported by the experience of the trade. On present evidence this yield seems highly probable, but, so far as known, has not yet been demonstrated."

LUMINOUS DUST. Recent Discovery Which May Find

Many Uses.
(St. Paul Pioneer Press:) A startling revolution in fashionable dressmaking has been made possible by the recent discovery in France of a highly-lumin most elaborate tollets of the past will be eclipsed. This new discovery applied to dressmaking makes possible dressmakers can hardly be overestimated. A woman cyclist, her gown dusted all over with this powder, would be transformed into a moving, shimmering figure of light on the darkest night. The refulgent light could not be extinguished by the hardest rain. It would be visible, not only for a considerable distance, but would shed a soft glow over everything around. A wheelwoman equipped in this way would never be in danger of being arrested without a lamp.

would never be in danger of being arrested without a lamp.

The most attractive use of the new powder yet discovered is in making lace worn on black dresses luminous. A special powder which produces a soft pearl light nas been recently used for this purpose in Paris. The effect of bands and festoons of this soft light upon a black dress is said to be witching. When such a costume is worn by a wheelwoman, this remarkable luminour lace fluttering and swaying in the breeze produces a very beautiful effect.

There is at present a house in the Rue tiful eff.ct.

There is at present a house in the Rue de Longchamps, Paris, where a windowless suite of rooms is lighted entirely by this powder. Everything in the apartments is covered with it, and a number of striking color effects have been introduced. The apartments seem bathed in moonlight, and the curtains appear as if studded with glowworms. The furniture is rubbed with the powder, and the walls and ceiling treated with it, radiate light. The playing of light on all these colored objects produces an effect suggestive of the most fanciful conception of Aladdin's magical underground palace.

A Bond of Sympathy. (Cleveland Plain Dealer:) They were testing a new armor plate. It had successfully resisted shot after shot.
"Here," said 2 bystander, "try this new projectile." and he tossed a cube of dark brown material to the chief gunner.

A moment later and the charge passed squarely through the wrecked armor plate.

"Have you any more of those remarkable projectiles?" inquired the astonished (it'irance officer.

"I'll see if I can't get you a couple of paneful tomorrow afternoon," replied the stranger, with a grim smile, "Saturday is the day we have 'em to burn."

"My wife's Vassar biscuits."

By a commen impulse the two mensos trangely thrown together, clasped hands in cordial smypathy.

"I married a Wellesley girl myself," said the ordnance officer.

"Have one with me," feelingly remarked the stranger.

Then they turned aside and sampled a small bottle of dyspersia tonic.

Instead of Printing Dots and Dashes
It Typewrites Messages.

The "zerograph," the invention of Leo Karum, is, it is said, being tested by the British postoffice department with a view to introducing it into the national telegraphic system. The peculiarities and achievements of the device, which is practically a typewriter whose keyboard actuates type bars miles away, may be learned from the following paragraphs taken from an interview with Mr. Karum by a reporter of Black and White (London). The inventor describes it as follows:

"It is a telegraphic instrument that,
instead of printing dots and dashes
on a strip of paper, typewrites a message on a sheet of letter paper at both ends of the wire simultaneously. The two machines are identical in every resect, and can be used indifferently as transmitters or as receivers. . The operator depresses the keys, as in ordinary typewriting, and this causes a current from a local battery to disengage
a balanced pendulum in both machines.
There are thirty-six signs for letters, numerals and spaces. You observe this circular framework consisting of thirtysix upright bars? The machine is constructed so that it takes half a second for the pendulum to travel from end to end of this framework, and fractions structed so that it takes half a second for the pendulum to travel from end to end of this framework, and fractions of half a second (down to a thirty-sixth) for it to move between various intervening bars. Now the letter or numeral printed will depend upon the space moved by this pendulum. In other words, upon the length of time which elapses between two successive electrical impulses. There are various automatic devices for moving the paper, adjusting the allgrament, inking the electrical impulses. There are various automatic devices for moving the paper, adjusting the alignment, inking the letters, and so on. The fundamental principle whereon the machine is worked is the absolute synchronism between the two instruments. But for this absolute synchronism—isochronism is the precise term—it would be impossible to produce the same symbols at both ends, because the difference between one sign and another resolves itself into minute differences of time." In answer to a question regarding the advantages of his invention over existing forms of printing telegraph, the inventor said:

"My invention has certain advantages. It prints on an ordinary sheet of paper in lines and paragraphs. Instead of requiring an experienced telegraph operator it can be used by any one who typewrites. It can be used in private offices like the telephone, and worked at all times of the day or night without the intervention of telegraph officials. The machine is automatic, and delivers its message whether there is or is not some one at the receiving end. It has also the advantages of dispensing with clockwork, motors and other cumbersome and costly devices. pensing with clockwork, motors and other cumbersome and costly devices. Whereas other instruments operate at a minute, I can see my way to increase minute, I can see my way to increase speed of twenty-live to thirty words a minute, I can see my way to increase speed to forty words a minute.

ELECTRIC SHOCK VICTIMS.

French Authority Prescribes Formula of Treatment.

One of the contingencies of modern civilization which is almost entirely new, and is wholly dependent upon the development of modern industry is the treatment of accidents from electric shock, says the Medical Record.

The matter has been discussed quite thoroughly by physicians in this country, but it has been worked out perhaps more systematically by Dr. D'Arsonval of Paris, who has recently made a report to the Academie de Medeche of Paris upon the method of treating persons injured by electrical shocks. D'Arsonval states that electricity causes death sometimes directly by the disruptive and electrolytic effects of the charge on the tissues. This death is final. It sometimes, however, causes death indirectly by arrest of respiration and syncope, caused by stimulation of the nerve centers. Under these circumstances a person may be revived if proper measures are applied.

piled to dressmaking makes possible a perfectly bewildering variety of effects. The discovery, recently announced in Paris, was made by M. Henry, a French scientist. The principal ingredient of this magical powder, says the New York World, is sulphate of zinc, which, it is generally known, possesses the power of absorbing light and giving it back in the dark.

M. Henry has succeeded in manufacturing, at triffing expense, a powder which can reproduce almost any color of the rainbow. It is impervious to moisture, is not affected by carbolic or any weak acid, and is, therefore, absolutely permenent and durable.

The formula for reviving the victim of electric shock is this: The person so disabled should be treated like one drowned; in other words, he should be laid upon the back and artificial respiration performed in the way that is expensed and active the practical advice, however, is given to those who are called at once to the scene of the accident, and at the time when the person is perhaps still in when the person is perhaps still in contact with the wires. Of course, the first thing to be done is to stop the current or break the contact.

Nothing that is wet should be thrown upon him, and if his clothes are wet the hands should not be put in contact with them. A piece of dry wood can be placed under the body, and he can then be lifted. The further treatment of the case is the familiar one applied in attempting to restore the drowned. The arms are worked and the tongue kept drawn out; the body may sometimes be rubbed the body may sometimes be rubbed thoroughly with a cloth or brush in order to increase the circulation of the blood. Oxygen and perhaps a stimu-lant may be employed.

EMERALDS NOW THE RAGE.

Fabulous Prices Paid and New Designs in Cutting and Setting. (Washington Star:) The craze for eralds is being revived, and the beau tiful green brilliant is now second only to the diamond in popular favor.

Let nobody imagine that the item of cost has anything to do with the suden popularity of the emerald, for with the exception of the sparkling crystal from the mines of Golconda and South Africa, no gem is so costly as the emerald.

The prices asked and obtained for some of these jewels seem almost incredible. The cheapest brilliant of this description in one store was valued at $750, and from that prices ranged up to $10,000.

description in one store was valued at $750, and from that prices ranged up to $10,000.

With the increased demand for these gems come new designs in cutting and setting. Often, too, the emerald is polished and ground down and not cut. To the jeweler a stone thus prepared is known as an en cabation, or uncut. Others, again, are cut into different shapes in high relief, and as hemispheres, hearts and pendants. The most popular stones used to combine with emeralds are diamonds, which, however, are, as a rule, much smaller than the green gems when they are set together.

A new style of cutting, which originated in the far East, the native home of the emerald, and which has but recently been introduced by western jewelers, is that of engraving coats of arms on gems. This greatly increases the cost of the stone.

Among other curious designs in which the emerald predominates this season is that of a diamond and emerald brooch which can also be used as a tiara. The design seems to be taken from a clover leaf with a big pear-shaped emerald in the center. The leaves of the design are open work thickly set with small diamonds. Another design is something after the style of a "sunburst," with a large square-cut emerald in the center. N. Y., is the possessor of two genuine copies of Horace Greeley's publications, "The Log Cabin," and "The Extra Log Cabin, says the Syracuse Post. The Log Cabin was published simultaneously in New York and Albany, and was a four-page sheet of twenty columns. The copy in the possession of Mrs. Tisdale is dated September 20, 1840, and is the twenty-second number of volume one, published by H. Greeley & Co. It is a campaign, publication devoted to the interests of Gen. William H. Harrison and John Tyler, who were candidates for the positions of President and Vice-President.

The first page of the Log Cabin contains a letter to mechanics and workingmen on the wages of labor, written by Paul Inglis, a carpenter, The second page has some campaign news, the third page contains an account of the Young Men's State Convention held in Syracuse on Thursday, September 17. The address to the young men, prepared by Horace Greeley, is given in the report. On the fourth page is a campaign song, "Tippecanoe and Tyler. Too," an account of "One hundred thousand freemen in council" at the Miami Valley, convention in Ohio, and the address delivered by Gen. Harrison at the Dayton convention.

The objects of the Log Cabins are set forth in the following announcement: "The Log Cabin will maintain in all things the interests and vindicate the character of the farmers, mechanics, and laborers of our country—the dwellers in rude and humble cottages, as well as those who are enabled to live in more convenient and elegant structures. It will neither draw nor encourage any invidious distinctions in the community—but will set forth at all times the dignity and sterling worth of honest, useful labor, and the equal rights of the upright workingman to participate in all the honors and the responsibilities of public stations, even to the highest."

Mrs. Tisdale also has a copy of the first extra Log Cabin, which was

The Bicycle Too Swift for the Dog.

(St James Budget:) Was there ever, and will there ever be, such a craze as that of cycling is today? In the words of Lewis Carrol's carpenter, "I doubt it." Take up what paper you will, look at any part you like, and you will find something or other about "bikes or biking." I don't care whether it's the news part or the "ads," cycles, their construction and destruction, meet the eye everywhere. Take'the first instance I came across; it refers to the cruelty of thoughtless cyclists toward their dogs. The subject came up last Thursday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The report stated that a new form of cruelty had recently been brought to light under the action of the society, consisting of overtaxing the strength of dogs when running with bicycles over long distances at high speed. Some dogs would rather die than stop when following their masters, and this had actually happened without the knowledge at the time of their owners, who, nevertheless, would not be acquitted of blame for leaving their faithful aninevertheless, would not be acquitted of blame for leaving their faithful aniblame for leaving their faithful animals behind, especially after they had seen the least sign of their distress. It had come to the knowledge of the society that hundreds of dogs had been lost in country places consequent on cyclists outrunning them on roads where no trace of the course they had taken had been left. Cautions had been issued to bleyclists to leave their dogs at home or keep them in sight during at home or keep them in sight during their perambulations. Very few dogs are capable of keeping up with a fast bicyclist during a long run.

"Murrain in Orange County.—It is with surprise that I read Dr. Garner's treatment of murrain in cattle among your leaders of July 25, 1896. First, I will take Dr. Garner to task for bleeding in the year of our Lord, 1896; and, secondly, I will try and show how homeopathy would treat (successfully) this disease of murrain.

"First—It is generally understood that bleeding has been abolished from enlightened medical practice, aliopathic and homeopathic alike, by the grand stand taken by Hahnemann, the father of homeopathy, who proved that a few drops of aconite, to speak in general terms, would do all that bleeding was supposed to do.

"Authorities Against Bleeding.—I will quote from 'Conferences Upon Homeopathy,' by Dr. Grainier of Nimes, France, published in 1860, and by a few of his extracts I will show how the allopathic school of France of that day were beginning to look upon bleeding. The names quoted were the most celebrated men of their day, although their names may be foreign to most of us here today, and they prove that bleeding was worse than useless. And what is good for man is good for beast!

And what is good for man is good for beast!

"On page 310 in the book referred to, read: Prof. Cruveilher says: 'Lung fever (pleurisy) is certainly one of the complaints for which the treatment by bleeding has been most generally employed; yet I have never seen it stop the fever, which lasts five to nine days; on the contrary, how often do we see the fever appear with redoubled force after a long fainting fit, produced by copious bleeding!

"The illustrious Lordat, a great physioligst, says: 'Bleeding puts out of the power of those it has not killed to manifest any symptoms for some time. The affection which required (?) the bleeding reproduces the same symptoms as soon as the system has acquired sufficient strength to form them.

"Prof. Andral says: 'By either local or general bleeding you can in no wise remove this unknown cause." under gestions are owing to essentially vital phenomena, and rise independent of a more or less quantity of blood."

"Why, then, in A.D. 1896 are we taking blood away from animals to lessen congestion? If the animal, whose blood is quite thickened, according to Dr. Garner in these cases of murcongestion? If the animal, whose blood is quite thickened, according to Dr. Garner, in these cases of murrain, is treated according to homeopathy, as I will try to show (humbly, for I have but small knowledge in this interesting science.) the blood will regain its normal state on the animal's recovery, and the recovery will be quick in proportion to the amount of blood which the animal did not have to manufacture afresh. This opinion of not bleeding holds good in the United States generally, and I do not quite see how any one dare advocate such a method today.

"What is Murrain? Now I come to my secondly. Cyclopedia of Live Stock' (U.S.) gives no less than eleven names for murrain as they affect different parts of the body.

"James Moores, M.R.C.V.S., gives also a list of names, which all mean the same thing—murrain.

"Many authorities consider the disease to arise from some peculiar condition of the atmosphere, akin to that which produces cholera and influenza in human beings—Moore.

"The case cited by J. von S. above referred to was of a cow tethered on the north side of the swamp. The southerly breezes would give the cow the full benefit of the gases. (J. von S. thought it was a weed which caused murrain.)

"One of the main characteristics of this disease is the black, tarry blood, that will not coagulate, and containing rod-like bodies (bacteria,) It is the fever in the system which gives the blood this characteristic. James Moore gives the early syptoms as variable (extremely.) First, it may attack the cow very suddenly; second, it may come on slowly, the cow appearing slightly ill, but the damage to the lungs going on briskly inside; third, by violent purging, with great weakness and loss of flesh.

"The majority of cases present the following symptoms: A dry, short, husky cough, heard only occasionally. It is highly characteristic of the disease, and when once heard it is not to be mistaken. Milk often assumes a yellowish tinge. Appetite about normal. Second stage is marked: Cough frequent. Phlegm dribbles. Breathing short. Inward breath painful. Grunt heard in expulsion of breath. It does not want to move.

"The pain is owing to inflamed pleura. It is not much good trying to do anything at the third stage, and the author of the symptomology, James Moore, strongly impresses every cowowner to act on the first indications. dates were mentioned who would be willing to save the country, and incidentally draw a Congressman's salary. Faw, that smooth man from Monterey, is wearing his lightning rod on his hat, but the Collis collar which adorns his neck is likely to prove a non-conductor. Every effort has been made to break the Patton ranks, but thus far without success. The shrewdest manipulators of the Rose faction have employed every device known to the gang, but their assaults have met an unbroken front. After the adjournment Monday afternoon a venerable delegate from the country, who is one of the staunchest of Patton's supporters, was persuaded to take a drive with several of the Southern Pacific heelers, who promptly proceeded to fill the old boy up with whisky. The programme was to get him sufficiently "loaded" so that he would be unable to appear at the evening session. When he was finally deposited at his hotel, half an hour before the meeting, it was thought that the plan would work to a charm, for deposited at his hotel, half an hour before the meeting, it was thought that the plan would work to a charm, for he had imbibed copiously, never once refusing a proffered drink, but his entertainers had seriously underestimated the load he could carry, for as the convention was called to order at the evening session the well-soaked delegate rolled into his seat, "jagged," but still able to cast his vote for Patton, of the railroad push, and Unice Collis no longer hesitates to show his hand.

When the convention had been called to order Chairman Merritt, whose ideas of parliamentary procedure are unique, announced a question of privilege, and called upon I. E. Messmore to present it. That individual prefaced his remarks by a declaration of loyalty to the nominee of the convention, whether it should be Rose or Patton, and then he said that certain parties purporting to represent the Patton side had made statements through the public press which, if true, would demand decided action. But if not true these representations should be repudiated. The speaker then read from the Examiner of August 17, an article describing the open juggling with proxies which Chairman Merritt indulged in at Ventura, which, it was said, would result in his removal from the State ticket as one of the Presidential electors. It was evident that Messmore had been deputed to administer a much-needed coat of whitewash to Merritt's reputation, and he proceeded with his job in handsome style. As soon as the operation had been completed, the secretary was directed to read a dispatch from George Hartman, It said: "My acknowledged proxy to Thomas McCaffrey is authentic, and it is and always has been my wish that my vote be cast for Rose as long as he is a candidate."

The balloting was then resumed. No change had occurred over night in the views of the delegates and the result of the first vote was 36 to 36. It was evident the Patton following had not yielded to the blandishments of the railroad manipulators. Upon the next ballot a roil-call was demanded, and when H. W. Peterson's name was called, there was no response. A sudden anxiety, overspread the faces of the Rose faction, but Tom McCaffrey had Peterson's proxy in his pocket and it was duly cast for Rose. The Southern Pacific train dispatcher apparently carries one-half of the convention in the same place.

Six ballots were taken, making nineteen in all since the first opening of the convention at Ventu

AFTERNOON SESSION.

When time was again called, the voluble Brooks rose to a question of privilege and resumed the whitewashing of the chairman which Messmore had undertaken in the morning. He was interrupted by D. McGarry, who pertinently observed that the question of Mr. Merritt's character was not what the convention had assembled to consider. This checked the "colonel's" eloquence and balloting was resumed. The roll-call indicated no change. AFTERNOON SESSION wreck but for S. S. S."

When half a dozen ballots had been taken, a man arose and declared that the proceedings were "child's play." But he was not a delegate and was accordingly ordered to take his seat. Five minutes later he was again on his feet, volunteering a nomination but his enthusiasm was finally squelched by the sergeant-at-arms. The balloting continued. Secretary Ramish announced the vote of each county without the formality of calling upon the chairman of the several delegations. From time to time thirsty Demecrats strove to obtain a tenminute intermission, but without success.

When the fiftieth ballot was reached a conference occurred between some of the statesmen, but it brought no result. The monotonous programme was resumed and the secretary continued to perform his automaton act.

Po Change of Votes has Occurred—Devious Methods of Rose Men—Coat of Whitewash Administered to Chairman Merritt.

One hundred ballots have been taken, and the deadlock in the Democratic Congress Convention is still unbroken. The vote still stands 36 for Patton and 36 for Rose. Arguments and entreaties have alike failed to induce C. F. A. Last to cast his vote and break the tie. The Southern Pacific highbinders have tried hard to get in their deadly work, but no vulnerable point has yet been found. Knots of politiclians were gathered about the sidewalk and in Turnverein Hall yesterday morning, discussing the situation. The Patton men wore an air of confidence, and avowed their determination to nail their colors to the masthead, while the railroad lackeys were loud in their declarations that the break, if there is to be a break, must be on the other side. little hall in East Los Angeles last evening when Senator Stephen M. White opened the Democratic cam-paign in Los Angeles with one of his most stirring speeches. About six hundred people were crowded into the stuffy, ill-ventilated little hall and the staircase, entrance and sidewalk outhangers-on.
At 8 p.m. the meeting was called to order by the chairman, R. J. Adcock and opened with a few introductory remarks by W. S. Creighton. J. L. Murphey followed, with the exact recipe for making a silver dollar as good as one of gold, evidently compounded since the speaker's revolt to the ranks of Democracy. Mr. Murphey kindly declared that he had some re-spect for the out-and-out gold man, since gold was one of the monetary metals of civilization, but he considered that man irretrievally lost who sugested that iron and other substances might be made legal tender. The impropriety of such a proceeding was made manifest, Mr. Murphey piously observed, by the reflection that God made gold and silver the precious metals, the inference being that the Almighty probably knew what He was about.

Mr. Murphey made free use of the customary arguments of the free since gold was one of the monetary All rumors to the contrary notwith-standing, Julius Martin has not retired from the race for Mayor. that the Aimighty probably knew what He was about.

Mr. Murphey made free use of the customary arguments of the free silverites, especially that of the "corner on gold," now held by foreign syndicates and which would inevitably be broken up by the free and unilmited coinage of silver. As regarded the flood of silver which such a state of affairs might precipitate, Mr. Murphey asserted confidently that India, Mexico and China needed all their own silver and would be more likely to buy ours than to send theirs here. As our silver coins would be good only in this country, it necessarily followed that foreigners would be obliged to come here to spend it, and in this outlook the future of the United States in general and of Los Angeles in particular, loomed up in dazzling prospects of rent, the purchase price of many acres of land and tons of commodities, in hotel bills for tourists, and many other varieties of the pecuniary plum. With much emphasis, Mr. Murphey assured his hearers that the old free-trade specter was dead and that, if every Republican were now turned from the halls of Congress, there would be no more danger of free trade. This danger now exists only in the limagination of the bold, bad Republican party, which wants to throw dust in the eyes of the people.

Taking up McKinley, Mr. Murphey kindly gave the audience to understand that he had nothing against that gentleman, whom he described as a "pretty good man," and then endeavored to explain his own change of base by asserting that the party had left him, instead of the reverse, as has been usually understood.

With regard to the manifold advantages of Democratic rule, the speaker confidently asserted that the tariff would be the same with either party in power, with free silver thrown in in the event of victory perching on the Democratic banners. To quote Mr. Murphey's exact phraseology, that party stands in an "impregniable" position on the question of finance

A plea for the miners followed, the speaker asserting that it was not fair to protect th protégé is strengthening his fences every day.

The men who do not love Liversidge with a brotherly affection declare that the Street Inspector has no warrant from Julius Martin to represent him (Martin,) but these sneers at "Jo's" authority are looked upon as the work of the green-eyed monster.

The Sixth Ward has developed a couple of candidates for Councilman within the past few weeks. These are W. A. Anderson and R. B. Lovell. The latter is reported as anxious to replace the present Chief of Police with one 'Gene Maxwell, and as a means to that end seeks a seat in the Council.

Wirsching is reputed to stand next to this push, and Rev. J. S. Pitman, of the Fourth Ward, claims openly that the selfsame "push" is backing him to a man. In the Fourth Ward the push is represented by "Johnny" Vaughn, and Pitman's followers declare that he (Pitman,) has made himself "solid" with Vaughn by having a contract awarded to Vaughn by which the latter is to supply the Board of Education with chemical goods, at 20 per cent. above manufacturers' prices. At this time chances are even that both Pitman and Wirsching will stay in the field for the nomination, with the incumbent smilling at their frantic struggles, and nursing no opportunity to build up his own candidacy, which is quite a healthy infant by this time

The free coinage of silver, according to this view, would help the miners, and, incidentally, the whole Pacific Coast. Therefore, California should lead in the silver movement. Touching anarchy, Mr. Murphy asserted that "we are not ashamed of being called Anarchists, for we are in good company." As the leader of this company, he referred to Altgeld, who, he declared, was not nearly so black as he was painted, his faults lying chiefly in the judgment of those who did not agree with him. As to the Anarchists, themselves, Mr. Murphey, in a frenzy of reckless courage, announced that he was not afraid of a few Anarchists, and that he had no use for a government that could be shaken by their bombs.

Mr. Murphey's chief grudge against McKinley seemed to be attributable to what he called the Ohio statesman's play on the words "untarnished dollar" and "untarnished ffag." Mr. Murphey's fastidious mind revolted at this apparent assertion of ownership of both the dollar and the ffag.

With his customary directness, the Senator plunged right into the heart of his subject by referring at once to the unfortunately self-evident fact that financial affairs in the United States were in anything but a healthy and flourishing condition. Just now, in the duliness which is the inevitable forerunner of a Presidential election, no money is being loaned by the bankers, and the distress is great in consequence. the addresses balloting was resumed, the result being the election of H. give abundance, but, since 1872, the agricultural wealth of the United States has diminished one and one-half billions, a sure sign that something is wrong. When the circulating medium is reduced in volume, the price of every thing goes down, hence the wide-spread distress among the producers. The act of 1873, he said, by reducing the volume of money in circulation, placed a greatly increased purchasing power upon the remainder. An increase of the currency will take the mency out of the hands of the few. as $1,000,000 is far less easy to corner and control than $100.

Gold, declared the speaker, was never, the money of the people. It is hoarded by capitalists and speculators, and is kept for special occasions. Although the sentiment in the East is so strongly for gold, the yellow metal is rarely seen there in general circulation. The Senator gave an amusing instance of this by relating an experience of his own at a Washington theater, where a $20 gold plece which he tendered in payment for his tickets excited so much suspicion at the box-office that the manager had to be summoned before change was given. "The man in the box-office," said the Senator, "had not seen a $20 gold plece for lo! these many days."

Silver is said to be too heavy for general use and inconvenient to carry, but the Senator raised another laugh but the Senator raised another laugh by remarking that he, personally, had never found any difficulty in carrying all he could acquire. To the other great argument, that of the compara-tively slight intrinsic value of silver, the Senator replied that the amount of both metals in the world today dem-onstrated the fairness of the proposed onstrated the fairness of the propose equal chance in law, it will readily be accorded equal rights."

After a sharp hit at the delegates and representatives sent to the national convention with the doctrine in their hands, to swallow their words and pledges when silver was voted down, Senator White urged the vital importance of this, the leading question of the day, and reminded his hearers of the time California had declared for silver. This State cannot afford to advocate that which she repudiated but a short time ago. The Democrats now stand upon the only principle with regard to money that was declared by the fathers of the republic when they fixed gold and silver as the national currency. If the currency is increased the gold dollar will be made "honest" by a necessary decrease in value, and the proposed legislation will place it side by side with silver where it belongs. The American nation is heavily indebted and the increase in value of gold decreases the ability to pay. The word "coin" used in the obligation of the United States meant both gold and silver. If a proper policy is pursued there will be no need to redeem greenbacks with either silver or gold. As to the assertion that silver does not circulate well. Senator White quoted statistics showing $558,000,000 of gold.

The late war inaugurated the present system of national banks whereby the financial interests of this great nation are under the control of a few men. It is to the interest of these that the country may remain in debt and that the continued issue of bonds may perpetuate the system which would otherwise cease to exist. As it is now, the government cannot stir hand or foot without permission from the great syndicates. The speaker urged that the government now stand on its own feet, independent of other nations, with a money system controlled by statesmen and not by bankers.

The Cotton Outlook.

(Jacksonville, Fla., Times-Union:)
The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 1,565,607 bales now, against 2,776,776 for the same time last year. This decrease of 1,211,169 bales is promising of good prices. If the drop had been kept within the limits of last year cotton would go beyond 10 cents before the end of the year. It is quite likely, however, that the crop will be one of the largest on record, and that in spite of the decrease in the visible supply the price will be much lower than it was last year, when it rose above 9 cents.

The price now, about 7½ cents, may be maintained, and probably will be unless the yield goes above 8,000,000 bales. If the visible supply were as large as it was last year the price would probably fall as low as 5 cents per pound.

The farmers of the South ought to contraduce the record of the court down their cotton green. They are rounds about an Englishman named Ernest Seyd coming to this country in 1872 loaded down with £100,000 with which to bribe Congress to demonetize silver. He is represented as not only having this amount of "British gold" as a starter, but authorized to draw for any further amount he might feel impelled to throw around among Congressmen.

This story was first started in Denver in 1892, and afterward repeated by a fellow named Luckenbach, who claimed to be a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He even went so far as to make an "affidavy" that Ernest Seyd had run him into a dark room in London, and, after putting Luckenbach "on his honor,"—an arti-cle very scarce with Luckenbach—pro-ceeded to "lift the veil" and tell how he had visited Washington in 1872 and at once saw the Finance Committees of the House and Senate, bought them up and paid over the £100,000 of British gold, and left on the next train. And that was how the "crime of 1873" was perpetrated.

Of course there is a certain class of people always ready to believe any slander of an honorable man, and that this is a miserable slander it is to prove by stating a few facts:

Ernest Seyd has not been in this country since 1856, and hence could hardly have visited Washington in 1872 and bought up Congress to demonetize silver. He has always been a friend of silver, as will be seen by extracts from his letter, given below. We quote from the speech of Hon. James T. McCleary of Minnesota, delivered in the House of Representatives, February 12th, 1896:

ruary 12th, 1896:

"The facts of Mr. Seyd's connection with the act of 1873 are simply these: He was one of the eminent specialists to whom the printed bill was sent for criticism and suggestions. Like the others, Mr. Seyd returned his views in writing. I have here the Record containing his letter.

"Section 15 of the bill, that providing for the silver coinage, received from him especial attention. The opening sentence of his letter, together with a portion of his discussion of section 15, I will read to you, in order that you may see the spirit in which he discussed the matter:"

He addresses Samuel Hooper, then chairman of the Committee on Coin-chairman of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, and one of the gentlemen said by Luckenbach to have been bought up by Ernest Seyd's British gold: LA PRINCESS STREET, LONDON.

Dear Sir: You were kind enough to forward to Mr. Alfred Latham a copy of your coinage bill for the United States, to be sent to me, and you expressed a wish to receive criticisms on its provisions.

and you expressed a wish to receive criticisms on its provisions.

Section 15. I now come to the most important part of the bill, that of the valuation, which according to section 15, omits the coinage of the silver dollar, and confirms the debased silver coinage of half-dollars and below under the tender limit of 45. I am aware, of course, that through the amendment of 1853 the same debased coinage was already established; but, although the actual coinage of the silver dollar had practically ceased, still that piece was not abolished by law. As this new bill presumably repeals all previous enactments, I suppose that the total abolition of the silver dollar is comtemplated.

Permit me to beg that you will first investigate the question of double vs. single valuation.

Apart from the theory, why should America have given up her silver dollar? The cause of its disapapearance from circulation is due to the original error of there being too much silver in the piece.

That cause would have been removed if the dollar weighed 400 grains, that being the true proportion of 1 to 15½ gold to silver, instead of 412½ grains, as by the old law. Why should it not be reintroduced at its true full weight of 400 grains and become again one of the active agents of commerce?

I am, dear sir, yours very obediently.

To Samuel Hooper, Esq., M. C.

I am, dear sir, yours very openinary, ERNEST SEYD.

To Samuel Hooper, Esq., M. C.

"These brief extracts are sufficient to indicate Mr. Seyd's attitude toward silver, and the manly, dignified way in which he presented his argument. The fact is that Seyd, Wolowski and Cernuschi were the three great champions of silver in Europe. They fought for it as knights of old fought for their lady loves. And it is the basest ingratitude for the friends of silver in this country to blacken the fair name of the greatest to blacken the fair name of the schembion of their cause.

"A garbled statement has been going the rounds pretending to be an extract from the Congressional Globe. It has misled many honest people. It is as follows:
"Ernest Seyd of London, a distinguished "Ernest has been going the property of the services and bullionist, is now here, and has writer and bullionist, is now here, and has the subject of mints gestions, which the committee accepted and embodied in the bill."

"These words were attributed to Mr. Hooper, then chairman of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, and are alleged to appear in the Congressional Globe of April 9, 1872, and I give you sow the sentence as it actually stands here in the record. It is as follows:

"Mr. Ernest Seyd of London, a distinguished writer, who has given great attention to the subject of mints and coinase, after examining the first draft of the bill furnished many valuable suggestions, which have been incorporated in the bill."

"Looking at the alleged extract given before, we notice that the words 'is now, here' have been interpolated. They ere not in the Globe, and the interpolation is done so clumpily as to betray the fact that the one who did it was as ignorant as he was unscrupulous."

"The story of bribery by Ernest Seyd started in Denver, Colorado. It was manufactured out of whole cloth. Senator Teller, one of the ablest advocate in this country of the free coinage of silver, lives in Denver, and repudiates the story.

COSTLY SILVER BULLION.

A San Bernardino correspondent calls attention to some errors (ascribed to the inaccuracies of telegraphic transmission) in the figures quoted by Senator Sherman in his Columbus speech (printed in The Times) relative to the amounts of silver bullion purchased by the government under the law of 1878 (Bland act) and that of 1890 (Sherman act.) The correspondent himself is cline in births is the decline in martht error by reason of th incorrect transmission of the figures by telegraph. From official figures The Times is able to give the correct statement as Senator Sherman undoubtedly received it from the Director of the Mint and gave it in his speech. A corrected table, showing the amount of silver purchased under the two laws, st of the same, and the shrink age in value, or loss to the government. is appended:

'Act of Feb. 28, 1878:
Fine ounces	291,272,018.56
Act of July 14, 1890:	$308,279,260.71
Fine ounces	168,674,682.53
Cost	$155,931,002.25
Total ounces	459,946,701.09
Total cost	$464,210,262,96
Market value at .69212 per or	2$318,338,310.75
Loss to government	$145,871,952.21

These figures are official, and may be relied upon. The market price of silver quoted .69212, was the price on July 21, 1895. Since that date the price has declined somewhat. It was quoted yesterday at .665. On this basis the loss to the government by reason of the shrinkage in value would be $158,-

This fluctuation of value to which silver is subject in the world's markets, under present conditions, is one of the serious objections to making that metal the monetary standard. The free-coinage regime, if carried out, would virtually demonetize gold, so far as driving it out of circulation could do so, and place our anancial system upon an exclusive silver basis. The silver ites denounce "monometallism" with great vehemence; yet the scheme they dvocate would give us practically a nometallic system, based not upon stable foundation of gold, but upon shifting and uncertain foundation of silver.

The question of labor for our unmployed workmen, unskilled and skilled, alike, must take precedence of all others. The Stockion Independent sounds a keynote when it says that It makes little difference to the man must work if he would eat, what a dollar is made of so long as he can-not earn the dollar" business man who affects to be in favor of free coinage cannot be said to have the courage of his convictions, or he clause demanding gold payments in the leases of his property.

WHITE SLAVERY IN KENTUCKY.

It is a sad commentary on presentday civilization that the grand old State of Kentucky has allowed the vagrancy law, as there enforced, to stand on its statute books. The operation of that law has again been brought repulsively to public notice by a "business" trans action consummated in Elizabethtown

A white man was convicted in the Circuit Court of vagrancy, and under steps of the Courthouse, and, in the presence of a large crowd, was auc tioned off by a deputy sheriff to a farmer for the term of six months for $12.75.

With the exception that the durathere is absolutely no difference between the method of disposing of him and the selling of a slave in slave days This abhorrent transaction has also come under the notice of the New York Mail and Express, which, commenting on it, says: "The transaction furnishes parallel to the familiar commitment to the workhouse or chain-gang. In the latter case no money is passed, and the vagrant is forced to pay penalty to the commonwealth which is abused by his presence. This legalized sale, even when thus limited as to time, of one human being to another, is a blot upon any State which sanctions it. Ken-

A Santa Monica correspondent writes confirming statements in The Times respecting Mexico and the public debt of that country. He says that the period of prosperity which Mexico is now enjoying is entirely due to the wise administration of President Diaz and his vernment, who have done everything their power to encourage investment of foreign capital. In this they have largely succeeded, and the result has been the construction of railways smelters and factories of different kinds permitting the manufacture of their natural products and transportation of them to the best markets. says the writer, "the silver basis that has made Mexico prosperous, but the liberal spirit shown by the country to induce capital to come there." writer then adds: "While the credit of Mexico has constantly improved, labor has not advanced, and today when sil ver dollars in Mexico are selling at about 50 cents, labor is the same price it was when silver was much dearer.'

The Times has never once questioned the sincerity of Thomas Jefferson nor sought to impugn his personal rectitude. Mr. Jefferson was a good manfor the period in which he lived, but the growth of an ambitious country has got beyond the scope of his teachings. In a letter to John Tyler he wrote: "I sincerely believe that banking institutions are more dangerous than standing armies, and that the principle of spending money to be paid by posterity, under the name of funding, is but swindling futurity on a large scale." Just imagine a public man of any note attacking the banks in this era of progress. The banks of the United States are what have helped to deconsideration it deserved. It is, in a velop the region west of the Rockies most eminent degree, a national one, as much as any other single factor. We have outgrown the swaddling because on its solution depends the continued existence of the French as a clothes of Jefferson's day and generanation. That much is clear, but just

In a recent interview with Gen. Horace Porter, that gentleman said that the ceremonies at the unveiling of the monument to Gen, Grant, at New York, triumphal show, the ceremonies attendant upon the removal of the body of Napoleon Bonaparte from St. Helena to the Hotel des Invalides at Paris. It is fitting that the Grant ceremonies should surpass those bestowed upon the insensate clay of the man of Marengo. Napoleon was a man of boundless genius, but his selfishness was likewise illimitable. Grant, on the other hand, was modest as he was brave; and his thoughts were for the good of his country first and the gratification of his personal ambition afterward. That was a distinction with very decided difference. A San Diego banker, doing business there since 1889, says that for the first time in his experience, people have been freely offering the banks government bonds for sale. He has received from one to three offers daily since the silver agitation became intense. He attributes the cause to a belief by the holders of these bonds that if free silver wins in November, gold will be forced to a high premium and the holders of the gold will be in a position to make more money thereby than they will to hold the government bonds at a low rate of interest—especially if this interest is to be paid in sliver of the 53 cent dollar variety. The New York-Liverpool voyage is eventy-eight miles, or nearly four hours, longer trip than the voyage between our Empire City and South ampton. Therefore, the recent passage between the two latter points, made by the American-built steamer St. Paul. proves her to be the fast st steamer in the world. Prior to this trip the Lucania and Campania, of the Cunard line, held the transatlantic records. Those ships are of 12,000 tons and 14,-000 horse-power, while the American ships are of 10,000 tons burthen and 8200 horse-power, showing clearly the advantage of good model over great

Any city which will grant railway franchises without compelling the would not demand the insertion of a railways to keep bridges in order, deserves nothing better than bankruptcy. They will be only spending their coin for nothing, Hilborn will be nominated, for they cannot pick up a candi date to defeat him; and he will be elected in spite of Mr. Huntington, the devil and Dr. Foster.

> A correspondent at Whittier writes The Times, expressing surprise that no Republican campaign literature has been circulated out that way, and asks why this is so. The Times asked the very same question in its own columns last Monday, but has since learned that the delay was unavoidable. Several packages of campaign documents have however, just been received at headquarters in this city, and will be distributed as quickly as possible. There should be no let-up in the good work.

Tom Reed's Sarcastic Oratory.

(Excerpt from his recent speech:) But we are all in a bad way, and something must be done. Yes, we are in a bad way. and something must be done, but don't make the mistake of thinking that any something will do. A sick man in proper cases had better take medicine, but he had better be careful what medicine he takes. There and some political orators who think if they can draw a rose-colored picture it ought to convert a continent. What a rosy picture we had painted for us in 1892! What millions we were to expect! We were to sell in the dearest and buy in the cheapest market. We were to have both ends of the bargain. We took their words for it and here we are. And now the least credible part of these same gentlemen are smearing the canvass with another picture for which they want us to pay another four years, or perhaps ten, of this nation's life. Men deceived once are human; men deceived twice by the same men are fools. Tom Reed's Sarcastic Oratory.

Jerusalem is Growing.

(New York Tribune:) According to a lady who has lived in Jerusalem for forty years, the Jewish population of that city is increasing. "Twenty-two years ago." she says, "there were only between 15,000 and 20,000 Jews in Jerusalem. In those days no houses were to be found outside the magnificent walls, the gates of which were closed at night. Since then many changes have taken place, and the Hebrew population—mainly on account of the increase of the Jewish immigration from Russia—now stands at between 60,000 and 70,000. Whole streets of houses have been built outside the walls, on the site of the ancient suburban districts, which for hundreds of years have remained deserted. It is not, however, only in Jerusalem itself that the Jews abound, but throughout Palestine they are buying farms and establishing themselves in a surprisingly rapid manner. In Jerusalem they form at present a larger community than either the Christian or the Mohammedan.

Mintage of Minor Coins.

(Albuquerque Citizen:) All the minor coins, cents and nickels, are made at the Philadelphia mint, and nearly 100,000,000 cents are coined every year. This large number is caused by the large annual loss in circulation. The profit of the government on their manufacture is large. The blanks are made for $1 a thousand by contract. Blanks for nickels cost a cent and a half apiece. Austria has for some years been experimenting with nearly pure nickel for its minor subsidiary coins. A little cobalt is used to harden it. It is claimed to be satisfactorily tested.

GERMANY READY TO SEND HERE ALL HER SILVER.

Mr. Bryan Severely criticised for Offensive Expressions — Stewart Talks Silver but Takes Gold. Some "Gems" of Oratory.

(Dayton, O., Journal:) Germany has about four hundred million silver marks or 100,000,000 thalers, which are worth in the markets of the world about 71 cents per thaler. This is the unsold stock of silver she has left after selling nearly 1,000,000,000 marks in her movement to get on a gold basis in 1873. All of this she would at once exchange for our American dollars worth change for our American dollars, worth at the start 100 cents in gold, we would become a soft mark for the rest of the

A Pertinent Question. A Privinent Question.

(Lincoln, Neb., News.) Potatoes are a staple agricultural product of the United States. If the money question is responsible for the fall in the price of wheat surely it ought to have produced a decline in the price of potatoes. Taking the twenty-year period 1876-1896, it appears that the average price was 53,4 cents a bushel for the last ten years. Will some silverite kindly tell us why gold has not appreciated, measured upon the potato standard?

(Tacoma Ledger:) That no people can keep abreast of civilization with a defective vaciliating or depreciated measure of values, should be under-stood by every human mind not closed to reason. That it cannot redeem its to reason. That it cannot redeem its own obligations, or guarantee the redemption of the obligations of its citizens, save in the best money of the world with which it deals, and of which it is an integral commercial part, should be obvious to a half-thinker.

A Low Expression.

(Dayton, O., Journal.) "A public servant is a hired man,"—Candidate Bryan in his Alliance, O., speech. The idea of a man presenting himself before this nation as a candidate for the position of its President, using such an expression. He would be chief exacutive of the United States terming himself a "hired man." Men, and as good men as ever lived are hired. But think of the President of this United States being called "a hired man."

Talks Silver, Takes Gold.

(St. Paul Pioneer Press:) Gold money (St. Paul Pioneer Frees.) Gold money to take in on mortgage payments, prin-cipal and interest; silver money to pay out wherever they have a debt to meet —these are the requirements of free-colnage leaders like Senator Stwart, but the latter says he had nothing to do with the drawing up of the mort-gages he holds, with the gold-payment clause. Oh, no! it was all left to his

Not to Be Fooled That Way. Not to Be Fooled That Way.

(St. Paul Globe:) Mr. Bryan continues to ring the changes on the one form of speech, which, as we stated some time ago, he evidently intends to make the keynote of his campaign. He talks everywhere, in his flight across the country, about "the plain people," the "tolling masses," and assumes in general everywhere that it is "the people" whose cause he, in particular, represents. This is a specious mode of campaigning, but we have an idea that Mr. Bryan will find that the voters are not to be fooled by it.

One Orator Marked Down.

(New York Mail and Express.) "You shall not need orators this year," cried William Jennings Bryan to a crowd that greeted him yesterday at Des Moines. Assuming that he meant to say, "You will not," we may be permitted to remark that among all the orators whose names crowd the American list, there is one, especially, who will not be needed this or any other year, save as a horrible example of what not to do in public life.

"To a Finish."

(Stockton Record:) The Democrats started out four years ago to reform the tariff—the revenue laws of the government. They did it to a complete finish. Now they have abandoned the tariff and propose to reform the country's finances. If they succeed as well in the present venture as in the tariff reform it will only require two officers in 1900 to administer what is left—a sheriff and a coroner.

(Cincinnati Times-Star:) What does Bryan mean by calling New York "the enemy's country?" East and West we are all Americans, aren't we? It is a long time since a candidate for the Presidency used such offensive lan-guage toward any section of our com-mon country.

One of His Five Gems

(Indianapolis Journal:) Here is one (Indianapolis Journal:) Here is one of the Bryan gems of oratory scattered in Ohio yesterday: "I am not distributing postoffices yet, but I hope to be before long." Think of a candidate for the Presidency so lacking in dignity and self-respect and in comprehension of the character of the great office he seeks saying a thing like that!

(New York Sun:) Senator Jones is wasting energy if he is trying to bargain with any Democratic leaders for the delivery of the Democratic vote for this city and this State to Bryan and repudiation. It is not in their keeping. They cannot deliver the goods.

Democratic Voters of Pennsylvania (Philadelphia Record:) There are more Democrats in Pennsylvania than in all the silver-mining States and Territories put together. Why should the larger body surrender its opinions and judgments to the lesser body in a dispute as to matters of fact and arithmetic?

General Mark So.

(Chicago Inter Ocean:) The New York Herald marks the activity and commercial prosperity of Europe and inquires: "What is the matter with the Unites States?" Well, the general belief is that it has had "four years more of Grover and clover," and they were just four years too many.

Their Peculiarity.

Populists Unwarned by History. Populists Unwarned by History. (Philadelphia Record:) It was only by stopping free coinage that France was enabled to maintain the parity of silver with gold. But the Populists of this country, in their strange infatuation, propose to begin where one of the most enlightened nations of the world left off. The Populists appear to believe that those natural laws to which the rest of the world yield, under heavy penalties for disobedience, have no application to this land of the free and home of the brave.

It Must Go. (Indianapolis Journal:) In a street-corner discussion yesterday the advo-cate of sound money said the chief fac-tor in regulating prices was the law of supply and demand. "Yea," retorted the free-silverite, "and then we get in that's one of the first aws that'll be repealed."

Song for Politicians. (Philadelphia Record: The title of a popular just now in th London music halls is: "I Didn't Knw Till Afterward." That is the sog which the American politicians will soon be singing.

What Will Be Left.

A Varied Assorment. (Washington Post:) The news from Maine indicates that thee are so many different kinds of Demorats up there that it is impossible to assify them.

He's a Dodge, Dodgi, Dodging. (St. Louis Globe-Denocrat:) Mr. Bryan is trying to dodg; the crown of thorns known to him as the Populist

Here are discrimination, humor and true enterprise. Mr. Sheldon is able to do what he promises to do. He is giving the farmers of Chautauqua the benefit of the inflated prices which the advocates of a 50-cent dollar desire, and is doing it without asking the United States government to become a repudiator and a swindler.

Honor to Sheldon of Chautauqua! May his business prosper.

(The prices offered in the above are just double the price that would be offered if paid in American silver dollars.—Ed. Times.)

Words from a Mine-Owner.

Words from a Mine-Owner.

(St. Paul Pioneer Press.) Maj. Mc-Kinley is in receipt of a letter from A. W. Harris, a "silver king" of New Mexico. Mr. Harris says: "You will doubtless be surprised to hear the avowal of sentiments in opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of silver by a silver-mine owner and operator of twelve years' standing, but such is the fact. I have never hesitated to declare that it was my settled opinion, derived from constant study and investigation of the subject that the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 would result in silver monometallism, and the constant overwhelming disturbance of the general financial systems of the country.

"The idea of making it a leading issue was conceived in a speech of repudiation and an anarchistic desire to break down the national banking system and the manufacturing and industrial system of the country. Now, while my chief interests are intimately associated with silver mining and I would gladly see the white metal appreciate in value by any proper and permanent means, I cannot wish its accomplishment at a sacrifice of the general weal and loss of national financial honor."

A San Diego man and wife, said to fly high in society, are making a legal fight to recover possession of their baby born before the parents had gone ough the formality of marriage, is another proof that blood is thicker than water.

If those Democrats hold out until the deadlock is broken by a dead delegate a conclusion can be reached. A hundred ballots with identically the same result-36 to 36-is quite remarkable and suggests that only a death— natural or violent—can help advance the convention's business.

A proposal has been made to the city uthorities of San Diego to sprinkle the streets traversed by electric cars with sea water squirted from the cars. This plan is now followed in Portland. Sprinkling by this method can be done more cheaply than by means of the street-sprinkling carts. Sea water on the streets is claimed to be more effective than fresh water. It is certainly

At a comparatively slight cost, the police department of this city is to re-ceive the benefits of membership in a central bureau of identification, with headquarters at Washington, D. C. The advantages of connection with such a bureau, whose ramifications will extend over the entire country, are obvious. The Police Commission displays wisdom in deciding to "jine" the bureau.

Child abandonment is only too common in the larger cities, but the or-dinary humanitarian would hardly look to society people for examples of utter degredation of maternal and paternal instinct. A cause on trial in one of the courts recites the social standing of the parentage of a beautiful male child, yet its natural guardians have consigned it to the sympathies of a cold world. The love of a child should transcend the adulation of the multitude. The infant has fallen into loving hands and the parents may con-tinue to walk with uplifted heads, deceiving themselves into the belief that their secret is unknown. A lie is never more than half concealed.

Doctors in the health boards in this State are doing good work killing tuberculous cows. The inspection of cattle cannot be too rigid. Dealers in tubercu-lous and adulterated milk deserve a long term in prison. Such people are nothing more nor less than possible murderers. And now comes a fresh source of possible tubercular infection for the human kind. This time it is the inoffensive duck. A health-board doc-tor was having a duck prepared for his table. The fowl had a peculiar appearance. The cook notified the doctor. Examination proved the duck to be thoroughly infected with tuberculosis. As cks properly cooked, are "done" rare, the tubercular bacilli in such a fowl might affect the man eating it. At the ne time it should be remembered that consumption germs, even when taken into the human system, do not cause disease unless the system is in a susceptible condition to continue the

ONTARIO.

ONTARIO, Aug. 18.—(Regular Correspondence:) The leaders of the Free Silver Club deny that there is any ontario, Aug. 18.—(Regular Correspondence:) The leaders of the Free Silver Club deny that there is any truth in the rumor which has been current, to the effect that a number of unauthorized names appear on its membership roll. An investigation of the club records indicates that the names thereon were placed there by the gentiemen possessing them, and that there is nothing irregular in the membership records. The whole affair seems to have grown out of a case in which a man authorized another man to place his name on the roll. The rlub has now thrown its membership book open for investigation, with the above results. The rain storm did not do any damage in Ontarlo. It was merely a sprinkle in the lower part of the colony, but up near the mountains there was a considerable precipitation. Over an inch was reported at the head of Euclid avenue. The stone storm drains did good service in carrying off the water and no washouts occurred.

Two parties of Los Angeles and Pasadena people made the ascent of Haldy last week. A part, with up Thursday, consisting of Misses Frances M. Lawton, Laura C. Garrett, Lillian I Davis, Margaret M. Davis, Los Angeles and Pound and Mrs. W. H. Whitmore of Alhambra.

The following named party went to the summit on Friday: Mrs. J. Pyates, Los Angeles, Miss Hicks of Ontario, Miss Parker of Pasadena, Miss Daft of Los Artels; Messrs. Parker, Perkins, Marston, rasadena; Freeman, Ontario; Yates, Moore, Los Angeles.

The fruit trees throughout the entire colony are looking better than is usually the case at this time of the year. None of the orchards are suffering for want of water and the trees are making a steady growth.

The Smith Premier Typewriter wins a great victory. The Board of Education placed an order for eight Smith Premiers after testing thoroughly in competition the Smith Premier, Remington, Densmore, Vost, Callgraph, Williams, Daugherty and Blickensderfer. The boards of education at San Francisco and Cakland had previously reached the same decision and bought thirty-two and fitteen Smith Premiers, respectively.

AVALON (Catalina Island.) Aug. 18.

—(Special to The Times by Homingpigeon Sharp Fanny, of the Catalina Carrier-pigeon Service.) "No trip to Catalina is perfect without the stageride" was the verdiet of fourteen happy people on board the Paloma as she swept up to the bath-house wharf last night. The start was made at 9 o'clock in the morning, and after a delightful sall of two hours to the isthmus, the passengers disembarked and climbed into the ponderous mountain coach, with its six prancing steed and George H. Greeley handling the ribbons from the box-seat.
Whether this noted whip is a relative of the celebrated New York journalist, who once took a stage-ride over ist, who once took a stage-ride over the Sierras with Hank Monk, deist, who once took a stage-ride over the Sierras with Hank Monk, deponent saith not, but the way he gets the speed out of those six horses indicates that he has none of the timidity shown by Horace in his memorable ride over the mountains. A crack of the whip over the steek backs of the horses and away you go, up and down, over the wild, mountainous interior of Catalina, catching ravishing glimpses of the sea, sometimes a thousand feet below you. In little more than an hour the coach draws up before Little Harbor Inn, on the opposite side of the island. Here, on the broad plazza overlooking the bluffs, lunch was enjoyed. On the return trip the conversation waxed political and a vote was taken, and stood 11 to 4 for McKinley, and no "stuffin" allowed, and the small boy remarked. "All the horses are for McKinley, too." At favorable points along the road the stage and its ocupants were photographed. Those who enjoyed the trip were: Misses Libble Harnett, Marian Armstrong, Hilda Brode, F. E. Freeman and Messrs. Leo Brode, E. A. Helnzman, W. H. Carroll, J. E. Logan, J. H. Doyle, all of Los Angeles; Misses Minnie C. and Emily B. Albert of Dayton, O.; Mrs. G. H. Riddell and son of South Bend, Ind., and Mrs. A. The yellowtail are biting with such vengeance at the isthmus as to create great excitement on the part of sportsmen. One gentleman standing on the beach caught thirteen yellowtail and five rock bass in an incredibly short time. This is only one man's record, and others have equally startling tales to relate.

Dr. and Mrs. W. Becket and Prof. C. S. Cornell of Los Angeles arrived last night, and are at the Island Villa for a week's stay. Other arrivals at this popular hotel are Miss Lucy P. Nelson, H. A. Darling, P. H. Mathews and wife, W. E. Stearns and wife, Lillian I. Mason, all of Los Angeles; Dr. J. S. Hodge of Pasadena, H. A. Burbank of Chicago and John J. Goff of New York.

Another hunting party, which started out this morning looking very fierce, mounted on horses and carrying guns, were two young Los Angeles men, Bert Safford, son of the president of the California Truck Company, and young Wattelle, son-in-law of L. J. Rose. It is expected that the entire truck company will be kept busy for several days after the return of these young sportsmen in hauling the game felled by them.

J. B. Banning and Chief of Police Cline took a day off yesterday and chased the festive goat 'round about Empire Landing, returning at nightfall with a fine specimen of the monarch of the island.

A party of young people, Marcia and Clarence Riley, Albert and Rudolph Hahn, Forrest Whittaker, Dora Schallard and Jessie Tritt, chaperoned by Mrs. Tritt, had a thrilling experience the other day, when they landed at one of the beaches. The tide came in and they were unable to get off. A party of friends, Jack Adams, Albert Oyler, Harry Havill, Ernest Langbein, Amy Oyler and Miss Hattie Austin of Boston went to the rescue. Recent arrivals at the Sea Beach Hotel are: Prof. H. P. Chambers, Georgia Gay Miller, Iva M. Dezelle, Ira D. Saulsbury and Mrs. Henry Glese of Los Angeles; E. E. Bourguin of Delta. O. Henry C. Foetisch, a bank cashier of Albuquerque, arrived last night, for a stay of two or three months, and Mr. and Mrs. John Fielding of Arizona left this morning after a delightful sojourn of several weeks at Avalon.

Mrs. Dalrymple and family of Pasadena break camp tomorrow after a delightful sojourn of several weeks at Avalon.

Last night's arrivals at the Metropole were: C. K. Newhall and wife, M. W. Flournoy and wife and child of New Mexico; Jay Dewey and wife of Phoenix, Frank P. Gould of Omaha, Mrs. George J. Hopkins, Pasadena; M. A. Dudley of the St. Elmo Hotel, Los Angeles; E. J. Alger, W. W Howard, Walter H. Lyon and Miss Julia Lyon, all of Los Angeles.

Messrs. L. Biddle and M. Rider eclipsed all other fishermen yesterday with a catch of 125 sand-dabs, which they landed in two hours, including a muscatelle weighing twenty-five pounds.

J. S. Torrance has returned from a short business trip to Pasadena to spend the balance of the month, and will resume his battles with the yellowtails.

These beautiful moonlight evenings are being enjoyed to the full. Last night there was a gay yachting party on coard the La Paloma and another is booked for this evening.

The swing-wharf at the bath-house broke this afternoon at 2:30 when crowded with people waiting to board the Paloma for Camp Banning to witness the football game there. Fully twenty-five people were thrown into the water, but none were injured beyond a thorough drenching. Rowboats by the score fiocked to the scene, and many people rescued themselves by clinging to the wharf till help arrived. Thought the Was Hurt.

A man named McCarty caused the police Department considerable trouble last night. He was lying on Fifth street and a citizen thought he had been injured and telephoned to police head-quarters. McCarty was taken to the Receiving Hospital, the operating table made ready and a physician was called and then it was discovered that he was simply drunk. He was transferred to the drunk cell and will probably have to explain matters in Police Court today.

Fire at San Fernando. A barn containing 100 tons of hay and fifteen sets of harness belonging to George K. Porter at San Fernando was destroyed by fire Monday night. The loss was about $2000 with no insurance. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

(Fresno Republican, 7th:) The grace which floweth out of Zion appears to be running in a rather small and murky stream over in some parts of the African settlement. Probably the uncommonly hot weather has affected it. Of course the Reberend Brudder Blackwell, being a Baptis' by faith, it perhaps is not strange that he has concluded to preach no more to the Methodisses, but the testimonials of love and esteem which his recent little flock hurls after him are enough to make his hair stand straight with horror. To be sure, the whole affair is of no interest to 'society,'' but I have heard somewhere that even these black sheep of the fold have souls to save, and if they have, the remarks made by some of them would seem to indicate that they had better get in and rustle if they calculate to harvest any salvation this season. with inquiries from all parts of the United States as to the production of sliver and gold and requests for all sorts of statistical information on the subject. Director of the Mint Preston stated today that he has received on an average of 150 letters a day for the past two weeks asking information on the money question

"I have noticed," said Mr. Preston, "that the greatest number of these letters come from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan. There is one little town named Winchester, out in Indiana, from which we receive on an average four and five letters a day. The majority of these letters are well written, and indicate an honest search after information, and a good knowledge of the subject of finance. I would take these letters as an indication that the hottest campaign for sound money is to be waged in the States above named. I have been very much surprised also to find so much ignorance among people who one would suppose, were in a position to be well posted on finance. I get letters from cashiers of national banks, for instance, for the increased value in the silver of a dollar in the event of free colmage obtaining, whether it would be the individual furnishing the bullion or the government."

Underwear of the very best class will find favor with those who wear good underwear. It will find buyers this season with all classes for the reason the prices are fully 50 per cent. less than usual for this same class of underwear. We are showing an extra fine line of Underwear, that is the equal of any 50c underwear in the town. It is fully as good as any underwear that has ever been sold for 50c. This special lot will be on sale for 331c a garment. Don't pass this over without giving special attention to what we say.

A better Hose bargain than usual. The price is lower than the same grade has ever been sold for, 25c a pair. The equal may be found for 35c; we doubt it. Finest Egyptian cotton; very elastic double heels and toes; three-thread yarns; absolutely fast black. We make a special price of 25c a pair. They are direct from the mills to our counters. Don't compare with 25c goods; compare with the best 35c hose in the town. They will bear comparison.

A little more inquiry for Black Dress Goods. There will be busy times this fall in black dress goods. Shirt waists will not do for the winter. It will be full suits, and full suits are much nicer in every way. Take a look at some of the new things. They will surely please you. Our black goods stock is very large.

an accompanying ordinance on Sundayclosing.

"Your Committee on Public Morals, to whom was referred the matter of presenting an ordinance providing for the closing of business houses on Sunday, would beg leave to report that they have had an ordinance prepared by the City Attorney, under the committee's instructions, following almost the exact language contained in the petition which was referred to them, and excepting only those classes of business which petitioners asked might be accepted."

The ordinance presented by the committee was worded as follows, being entitled:

titled:
"An ordinance to regulate and provide a day of rest in the city of Los Angeles, and prohibiting the keeping open of certain places of business on such days of rest.

"Section I. Sunday is hereby prescribed as a day of rest in the city of Los Angeles, and every person who keeps open, or causes to be kept open, or assists in keeping open, on Sunday, any store, workshop, banking house, barber shop, or other place of business for the purpose of transacting business store, workshop, banking house, barber shop, or other place of business for the purpose of transacting business therein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $50 or by imprisonment in the city jail for a term not exceeding fifty days, or may suffer both such fine and imprisonment.

"Sec. 2. The provisions of the preceding section do not apply to persons who on Sunday keep open hotels, restaurants, livery stables or retail drug stores for the legitimate business of each."

This report with the ordinance precipitated a rather warm debate, in the course of which a number of amendments were made to the ordinance. By these amendments the following lines of business were made exceptions of: Bakeries, newspapers, ticket offices, steam railways, street railways, public library, fruit stands and soda fountains.

The Council adiourned at 12 cicket.

At 2:30 o'clock, an afternoon session was begun, but it was no more prolific of results than the preceding meeting. At 3 o'clock Councilman Ashman moved to postpone further consideration of the ordinance until next Monday at 11 o'clock, and the motion prevailed.

The plaintiff was the first witness called. Mrs. Smith related the coming of a young woman to her hospital in maternal distress; she remained a few weeks and gave birth to a son, the bright little fellow now in court first seeing the light of day January 17, 1894. The young mother remained at the hospital for five weeks and then departed, but presented Mrs. Smith with the baby before finally bidding the mite of humanity a last good-by and leaving it to the tender-mercles of Mrs. Smith and a cold, cruel world. The babe's experience appears to have been a sad one of constant changes. Mrs. Smith and the mother took the child fo Mrs. Rowen, another unfortunate, in that she now languishes in the County Jail. The child's mother went back to San Diego, but paid the child's board for nearly two months, and then finally abandoned the waif.

Mrs. Smith says she regarded the child as her own and paid for its board in other families, desiring that it should receive better care than she could devote to it in her hospital, having a great many cases and bables to look after at the hospital. The plaintiff was the first witness

At a later date Mrs. Smith says she took it to Mrs. Judd for keeping, agreeing to pay her $10 per month on a two-years' contract. Mrs. Judd is the mother of Mrs. Dobbins and the latter, with her husband, has been living in the same house, and it is thus that the child nassed into the hands of Mrs. hild passed into the hands of Mr. nd Mrs. Dobbins, who fairly worship he child and it returns their devotion with all the clinging love of infant na-ure. The parentage of the child is kept a profound secret, a letter from the mother to Mrs. Smith being examined by the attorneys, passed up to the court and returned to the custodian, with an agreement on all sides that the telltale missive of shame should not be filed in evidence. The child's mother was admitted by the attorneys to be well connected in this city. The infant's father lives in San Diego, the pagents having married since the the parents having married since the child's birth. with it now; some time in the ruture he might receive it.

A brief article was now read from a newspaper, purporting to be a verbatim a copy of a letter written a few weeks ago to Mrs. Smith by the mother. This article asked that Mrs. Smith use her best endeavors to place the child in a home for children, and offering to pay $5 to help push along the outcasting cause; the woman said she had no money and was enduring a great deal of trouble. Mr. Harris insisted upon filing this article as a true copy of the letter, excepting the name, and said his purpose was to show that the child was still uncertain as to its future under a successful operation of the writ. He contended that Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins loved the child as dearly as if it were their own, and its attitude toward them was that of confidence and deepest affection.

Mr. Shinn contends that Mrs, Smith loves the child and is a woman of means and character and should be awarded its custody; she has already paid out several hundred dollars for its care and has planned for giving it an excellent education, the same as she has done for her grown daughter. Mrs. Smith has one other daughter. 7 years old: she says she will educate the children together and give the bright little boy every advantage within the scope of her power and love. A large number of witnesses were called and gave Mrs. Smith a good reputation as an affectionate, honorable woman. Mr. Smith joins his wife in seeking the custody of the boy. Mr. Dobbins walked downstairs with the little fellow last night and told the reporter of The Times that the boy was as dead to him as his life. During the conversation the child was smilling and had his little arms about the strong man's neck. At this moing the conversation the child was smiling and had his little arms about smiling and had his little arms about the strong man's neck. At this moment Mrs. Dobbins and three or four ladies passed out at the Courthouse door, and the "Little Boy Blue" cried out. "Oh, papa, come! Mamma has gone!" The tears filled the man's eyes and he exclaimed as he bade the reporter good-night, "I feel as if I would rather lose everything on earth than this bov. He is a noble child; poor little fellow, he is always obedient, happy and full of love!"

The cause will be resumed this morning and the custody of the child will probably be determined today. And who are the child's parents? If the father were a lawyer he might take some interest in the proceedings.

Southern California Railway Company against Charles Legge and others of Pasadena.

This cause was tried by a jury in Judge York's court a few months ago, and resulted in a judgment for defendant in the sum of $8698.75. Legge refuses to receive the money.

W. A. Harris, Esq., Legge's attorney, has consented to dismiss the motion for a new trial and permit an entry to be made to that effect, as well as authorizing the railway company to forthwith take possession of the property and use it for all the purposes set forth in and sought by the complaint in said action, until a final order of condemnation shall in due course be made by the court.

Henry J. Stevens, Esq., is attorney for the railway company, and paid into court the amount of the award of the jury, $8598.75. Mr. Harris refused to accept the check, hence the above order.

Mr. Stevens remarked that Mr. Harris was the first attorney he had ever known who refused to receive money. The court inquired if Mr. Harris's objection was based upon a poposed payment in silver. This question was answered in the negative. Mr. Stevens said he would not believe that a lawyer would object to silver as a personal possession, although he might do so as a national policy, and added: "A lawyer down in San Diego went out to Yuma to make a stake and got into a game of poker. When about $3000 in silver had been piled upon a table, a row occurred, builets fiew fast, and the San Diego man grasped the money and swam the Colorado River, arriving on the other side in possession of the funds. If a man can swim the Colorado River with that amount of silver, Mr. Harris should not object to carrying away a should not object to carrying away a few thousand of the white metal."

The inchlumber was also torn loose, and the cell looks as if it had encountered a Kansas cyclone. A piece of iron three feet long and two inches wide was ripped from its fastenings on the wall, and had not the watches at the jail interfered, the building would soon have presented a Samsonian appearance. The cell grating was started in a window, and would have been torn out within a few minutes. Five watchmen darted into the cell and overpowered the frantic Mexican; he struck at one with his iron bar, and came near ending his days of usefulness, felling the man like a beef.

Acosta was strapped down, and is rapidly recovering from his frenzy. Last night the straps were removed, and he was admitted to the freedom of the corridor. He talked rationally, and appeared to be a well-disposed fellow. A Times reporter talked with him, and learned of the trouble that led to his temporary-insanity.

Encarnacion Acosta was drugged. He says he furnished the music for a Spanish dance near San Gabriel; he was paid $5 for his night's musical talent, and was encouraged to take four drinks during the night; he declares the liquor was poisoned—drugged. When he regained consciousness, his money was gone, also a fine silk shirt, new hat and good coat.

Acosta is a married man; his wife and child are now with his brother at Santa Anita, where he has been at work for some time. He is not a large man, probably weighing little more than 170 pounds, but his is a model figure; he will not measure less than 44 inches around the chest, and has the shapely hands and feet of a woman.

It was rumored that Acosta had received an injury to his head from a falling brick, but he denied the truth of the report. The whole trouble, ha declares, was the result of being drugged. When placed in the cell he could not contain himself; he had an awful presentment that he was to be murdered. He said he believed he would be all right in a day or two.

July 2, to the effect that Lady Millais had arrived at Windsor Castle and had had the honor of being presented to the Queen by Her Royal Highness, the Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne. For the court circular is revised each day by the Queen personally before being issued to the press, and the intimation thus conveyed is equivalent to a declaration from Her Majesty excathedra that the social ban hitherto in force against the wife of the president of the Royal Academy is at an end. Thirty years ago Lady Millais, a woman of rare beauty, whose features are reproduced in many of Sir John's most celebrated pictures, notably in the "Release of the Prisoner" and in the "Huguenot's Farewell," was the wife of John Ruskin, Millais at the timebeing a pupil in his studio. An attachment sprung up between young Millais and Mrs. Ruskin. With that unselfishness which has been one of the greatest characteristics of his entire career, John Ruskin declared that he had no intention of standing in the way of what he was convinced was his wife's happiness. Accordingly, following the chivalrous example set by Sir John Compton, formerly Minister at Washington, and afterward Ambassador at Madrid, in the case of his wife, née Victoria Balfe, who died as Duchess of Frias, he permitted his wife to bring against him in the court at Edinburgh a suit that he let go by default, and which was of such a nature that it enabled Mrs. Ruskin to contract a matrimonial alliance a Tew months afterward with John Millais under her maiden name of Euphemia Gray. It may be added that John Ruskin remained the good friend of Mr. and Mrs. Millais just in the same way that Hans von Bulow remained the best friend of his ex-wife and of her second husband, the great composer, Richard Wagner. Indeed, the finest portrait ever painted by John Millais is that which he did of his benefactor, John Ruskin, years after Mrs. Ruskin had been transformed into Mrs. Millais.

The latter has, however, for some years past, had a firm friend in Princess Louise, the fourth daughter of the Queen, and who prides herself far more on her skill as an artist, both with the chisel and with the herself the proper before a roughly the brush, than on being a royal princess. As soon, therefore, as the Princess found that Lord Salisbury had Princess found that Lord Salisbury had been led by important political considerations to induce the Queen to permit the presentation at a drawing-room of Lady Pirbright, the divorced wife of a Mr. Barnett, she at once tackled her royal mother and pointed out to her how graceful a thing it would be to accord a similar honor to Lady Millais. The Queen has a very soft heart, and it was to this that Princess Louise appealed, arguing the pleasure and conit was to this that Princess Louise appealed, arguing the pleasure and consolation which such an act of royal graciousness would afford to the dying president of the Royal Academy. Of course, it was out of the question for Lady Millias to attend a drawing-room at a moment when her husband was in the last stages of that frightful malady known as cancer of the larynx, to which the Ouene's favorite son-in-law. Emknown as cancer of the larynx, to which the Queen's favorite son-in-law, Em-peror Fredrick of Germany, suc-cumbed, so Her Majesty conferred upon Lady Millais the very rare and unusual honor of a private presentation at Windsor Castle, a distinction so great that it may go far to assuage the many slights which have been undergone during the past thirty years by Lady Millias.

THE LUXURIOUS SIDE OF CYCLING AND ITS DELIGHTS.

Raising as an Industry—To Re-place Missing Legs—Strengthen-ing Asphalt Roads.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10, 1896.—Dr. John Bedoe has been reviving the old question connected with the development of race types, of the relative influence of the blonde and the brunette complexion, Galton has pointed out how rapidly a community in which the age of marriage is late would be crowded out or superseded, other things being equal, by one in which that age is some years earlier. In England this consideration is one of several which account for the rapid extinction of upper class families, while the proletarist multiplies with great rapidity; and as the blonde type is more prevalent in the upper than in the lower classes, it also is probably in process of diminution. If, however, the lower classes, it also is probably in process of diminution, If, however, it can be shown that the blonde is more subject to diseases of such a nature as to shorten life, and reduce the duration of the period of child-bearing and child-begetting, another explanation can be found for Galton's English figures. There is a good deal of confirmatory evidence on this head in American statistics, which show the greater liability of blondes to certain classes of disease. From these it would seem that the blondes in the United States have less chance than the brunettes of contributing their due proportion to the next generation. Under these conditions the blondes ought to diminish relatively, and the brunettes to increase; and accordingly it is noted that of accepted soldiers there were among the white natives of the United States about 66 per cent. Iight and 34 dark complexioned, while among the English there were 70 land 39 per cent. respectively; and among the Germans 69 and 29 per cent. Thus the men of American birth are yielding a larger proportion of brunettes than those of any of the 'nations that have most largely contributed to their ancestry, which is nearly equivalent to saying that the Americans are more generally dark-complexioned than their ancesters were. There is comparatively little European evidence on the relation of complexion and disease. Dr. Beddoe's observations have shown that it is a mistake to suppose, as many do, that light-haired people are in England more liable to phthisis than others. He also points out that cancer is more common in persons of dak complexion, but states that this fact has after all, very little bearing on the subject in hand, for as cancerous diseases usually attack persons who are beyond the child-producing age, it can have very little affect on the proportions of the child-producing age, it can have very little affect on the proportions of the child-producing age, it can have very little affect on the proportions of the next generation. can be shown that the blonde is

It has for some time been apparen that cyclists have entered a phase in which their favorite pastime is to be enjoyed under conditions of greatly which their favorite pastime is to be enjoyed under conditions of greatly enhanced comfort and convenience. Formerly wheeling had to be prosecuted in the face of many obstacles, but now the rough-and-tumble side of the exercise is giving way to luxury. The wheeling hall have good roads, and roadhouses where his keen appetite can be satisfactorily appeased. Not long ago nearly every bleyclist prided himself on not allowing any one else to clean his machine. Now, where the novelty of owning a new machine has worn off, there is a surprising readiness to allow the wheel to be repaired and cared for by some one else than its owner. This tendency has led to the formation of a large company in London, the lines of which will, in all probability, serve for the somewhat similar organizations, which will unquestionably, sooner or later, be established in this country. This company will establish in London and the provinces, depots for the cleaning, repairing, storing and sale of cycles; the supply of all accessories connected with the use of bicycles; the teaching of wheeling and the provision of everything conductive to the enjoyment of the popular sport. A large and efficient staff will be maintained, who will travel about the various districts in which depots exist, for the purpose of cleaning and executing minor repairs to the machines of subscribers at their residences. For an ambual subscription of $6.50, cyclists are relieved of the cleaning and adjusting of their machines. The company also insures them against accident while cycling, for the following amounts: $500 at death, $250 loss of one limb, and $10 a week for ten weeks during total disablement. Subscribers' machines are stored when not in use and two $500 at death, $250 loss of one limb, and $10 a week for ten weeks during total disablement. Subscribers' machines are stored when not in use, and kept in perfect order until they are again required by their respective owners. Tuition is given free to all subscribers, from the grade of the learner to that of the expert. Each subscriber has a signal card, which he places in his window when the services of a tleaner or repairer are required. It is proposed to make the company's depot the natural cycling center in each district in which it is established. A further significant statement in the circular of the company is: "There are unmistakeable indications that the introduction of motors of various kinds is a thing of the near future, and it is proposed, in due course, to provide for the requirements of this class of machines."

TO REPLACE MISSING LEGS. An inventor of a new form of artificial leg says that if a man is so unfortunate as to lose his leg, there is no reason whatever why any one beyond his own immediate friends should no reason whatever why any one beyond his own immediate friends should ever know it. The new leg is said to be remarkably truthful in its simulation of the motions of the natural limb. It is a curious contrivance of hinges, sorews, and elastic bands. Extending downward from where the ankle should be to a point midway between the heel and the instep are two steel rods, placed one in front of the other. One rests on a sort of roller hinge, and allows the foot to give or bend with each step. The other serves the purpose of bringing the foot back into place after the step has been taken. Any lateral movement of these rods is prevented by the sides of the slot through which they move. A screw and a nut at the top of the rod also prevents the leg from turning, and thus giving trouble in walking. The similarity to nature in the form and action of the limb is increased by the placing of an artificial heel tendon within the foot, at the back of the ankle loint. This extends through a hole in the leg to a nut about half way up. It gives an astonishing flexibility and control of the artificial limb in walking.

TOOLS AT POMPEH. Prof. Goodman has collected some most interesting facts as to the tools how some of the instruments and tools they were in the habit of using could posibly have been made without such machinery as we now possess. Prof. Goodman says the thing that most impressed him, when visiting Pompeli was the resemblance between many of the implements of 1800 years ago and those of today. On looking at the iron tools grouped together in an old factory there, he could almost imagine he was gazing into a modern tool shop, except for the fact that there was a heavy coating of rust on the iron. Sickles, bill-hooks, rakes, forks, axes, spades, bllacksmith's tongs, hammers, soldering irons, planes, shovels, etc., are much like those used today; but the most marvelous instruments found are those for surgery, beautifully executed, and of design exactly similar to some recently patented and reinvented. Incredible as it may appear, the Pompelians had wire ropes of perfect construction. Their bronzes reveal great skill and artistic talent. The bronze brazier and kitchener had bollers at the side, and taps for running off the hot water. Ewers and urns have been discovered with interior tubes and furnaces precisely like the arrangement now in vogue in steam bollers. Metal safes had substantial locks. Many of the locks and keys are most ingenious, and some very complex. The water supply of Pompeli was distributed by means of lead pipes laid under the streets. There were many public drinking fountains, and most of the large houses were provided with fountains, many of them being of very beautiful design. how some of the instruments and tools they were in the habit of using could

STRENGTHENING ASPHALT ROAD An ingenious application of expanded steel has been made to the strengthening of asphalt pavements. This is sim ing of asphalt pavements. This is simply a thin sheet of metal with slits cut in it and expanded lengthwise by forcing these slits into diamond-shaped apertures. It was at first used only as a substitute for lathing in the construction of buildings. It is proposed to have steel sheets of one-half inch in thickness cut into large-sized strips, and then expanded under poweful pressure. These sheets will be inserted flatways in the concrete bed by first laying four or five inches of the stone and cement mixture, and then covering the entire surface with steel. Over this steel in turn will be put the rest of the concrete. When partly dry, a ten-ton roller will be passed over the base. The concrete will be forced into the interstices in the steel sheets, and the whole will make a solid foundation of great resisting power. ply a thin sheet of metal with slits cut

Where Cervantes Wrote Don Quixote
(Scribner's for August:) The chief glory of Argamasilla is the Casa de Medrano, a solid stone house, standing probably in the same condition, but for the decay of age, as when Cervantes was kept a prisoner in its cellar. There is little doubt that this is the very place where the design of the book, which was "engendered in a prison" (see prologue to the first part of Don Quixote) was first molded. He succeeded to one of the largest fortunes in Europe, this habits were studious and economical, he had no children, but, in spite of these advantages for saving money, he contrived to ruin himself. The Prince had a fancy for grotesque statues, with which he adorned the stately mansion of his forefathers, Many descriptions of the place are extant, for it was renowned through Europe in its day. Brydone visited it, and he left us a pleasant picture, Approaching by a noble avenue, one found the place encircled by an army of monsters. "The absurdity of the wretched imagination which created them is not less astonishing than its wonderful fertility." says Brydone. "Some were a compound of five or six animals which have no resemblance in nature. In one instance the head of a lion was set upon the neck of a goose, with the body of a lizard, the eye of a goat and the tail of a fox. Upon the back of this object stood another with five or six heads and as grove of horns. There is no kind of horn in the world that he has not collected, and his pleasure is to see them all flourishing on the same skuil."

Of such horrors there were 600 in the avenue and the collection, and the Prince maintained a regiment of sculptors, who were rewarded proportionately to their success in designing new and unparalleled combinations, The effect upon a superstitious peasantry may be imagined. BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSSES BOND AND WATER QUESTION.

His Arm - Montecito Voters Out for McKinley and Hobart-Chinaman Believed to Have Committed

SANTA BARBARA, Aug. 18.-(Regular Correspondence.) There was an un-usually interesting meeting of the Board of Trade last night at their cooms at No. 613 State street.

Twelve new members were enrolled. The attendance was large, and it was evidently not to be an ordinary meeting. Many subjects of public impor-tance were discussed. There was an tance were discussed. There was an encouraging report concerning the new bath-house proposition. The proposed "Refugio" road across the Santa Ynez range was considered of considerable moment, and M. B. McDuffle was appointed a committee of one to look into the advisability of opening the road.

The excursions set for Friday and Saturday were discussed at some length, and detailed arrangements were made for receiving and properly entertaining the visitors. Arrangements were also made for the proper reception of Co. F. Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., at Burton Mound.

made for the proper feeeption to co.

Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., at Burton Mound.

After all these subjects were out of the way, the approaching bond election was referred to, thus bringing to the whole water question, which is as deep as the sea, and as high as the mountains. Judge Canfield and Mayor Whitney are rarely ever at Board of. Trade meetings, and are seldom seen at gatherings where they are not interested.
Both were at the meeting last right, and both had something to say.

Judge Canfield led out in his accustomed fluent, plausible style. He considered this an opportune time to discuss this matter rationally, in order that people might vote rationally upon the bond proposition. He stated that a recent measurement of the water now flowing from the city tunnel had shown a flow of four and one-sixth inches, while a short time ago eight and ten inches had been reported. He reviewed at some length the experience of others in tunneling for water, showing that during the developing period, when new deposits were being struck, a heavy, gushing flow is natural, and would, in all probability, continue for some time, until outlying deposits were exhausted, but when the development stops and

Replying directly to the Judge, he said: "It seems to me that you take a very small view of this water question. You say nothing at all about sea water, which is the one thing in sight and available in unlimited quantity, and the bond issue is intended mainly to put sea water where it is needed and can be used. Assuming for the sake of argument that the flow from the tunnel is but one inch or less, we would still be justified in bonding the city for $50,000, or even $65,000, for a sea-water system alone, and would save money for the city, compared with the present state of affairs, besides having a supply of water for street-sprinkling, sewerflushing and for fires, which we never have had."

Silver Rep have felt hurt because Committee requires, as a qualification for participation in the primaries, an affirmative answer to the quest "Will you support the nominees of the last Republican convention?" These Bryan men really think they ought to have a voice in the coming Republican County Convention. The baldheaded cheek of the Bryanites, who would, under the cloak of Republicanism, do all in their power to stab the Republican nominees in the back, is most astonishing. "History of the Republican Party."
(Winona Republican:) The Los Angeles Times of July 4, 1896, is a McKinley Number and contains a vast amount of valuable information relative to the history of the Republican party from the date of its organization on June 17, 1856, when John C. Fremont and William H. Dayton were nominated for President and Vice-President. One of the interesting features of this issue is a brief history of the gallant Twenty-third Ohio Volunteers, of which Maj. McKinley was a member, enlisting as a private, being promoted successively to commissary sergeant, second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and captain, and near the close of the war was brevetted major by President Lincoln for "gallant and meritorious services throughout the war." The history of this regiment was written by Harrison Gray Otis, a member. This paper is an excellent McKinley number.

It is evident the outside capitalists are beginning to thoroughly appreciate the wonderful future which is in store for this favored section, as least one may judge so from the frequency of foreign investments in Southern California just now. With over $500,000 of Montana capital coming to build a sugar factory; with nearly $2,000,000 of English capital coming for investment in the Chino ranch, and with over $4,000,000 of South African capital (as is reported complex to invest in Los Areas and the complex to of South African capital (as is reported,) coming to invest in Los Angeles street-car lines, this section may well be proud of the position which it holds in the estimation of those who have money to invest. Such people are not influenced by prejudice or sympathy, but by the cold logic of facts. Possibly the enterprise of outside capitalists in putting their money into Southern California ventures may before long induce simulation on the part of some of our local men of wealth, of some of our local men of wealth, who have hitherto confined their in-vestments to lending money on mort-world. The American Cultivator has the following pertinent remarks on this subject:

"It took Great Britain 500 years to prepare for free trade, but she has never converted another nation. England, having secured the advantage derived from 500 years of skill and experience in manufacturing, sought to increase the prosperity of her manufacturing classes by capturing foreign markets. To this end, having no fear of competition in manufactures, and desiring cheap food, to stimulate low-priced labor, on June 27, 1846, she adopted free trade, removing all import duties upon breadstuffs and raw materials, as well as manufactures, and collecting her revenues from eighteen articles, mostly articles of luxury. Already England is taking steps to return, gracefully, but as effectively as possible, to a protective policy. She is shutting out American cattle, American sheep and American cattle, American sheep and American cattle, American sheep and American cattle, and the competition with her own farmers, and obliging those who would import meats into her country to import only dressed meat, or kill them at the dock. She is suggesting imperial confederation, which shall inure to the benefit of her own kingdom, and those of her colonies, to the detriment of the outside world. England's competitive superiority of her machinery, and her ability to undersell American producers has been due to her lower wages. Hence, if the free traders in this country desire to emulate the example of Great Britain, they must reduce the wages of the laborers and mechanics in this country to a scale equivalent to that which is paid in Great Britain."

ADULTERATED ITALIAN OLIVE OIL. With reference to a protest published in this column yesterday from Italian olive oil manufacturers, regarding statements made by a California olive man in a San Francisco journia olive man in a San Francisco journia olive man in a San Francisco journia of colive of olive oliv garding statements made by a California olive man in a San Francisco journal regarding adulteration of olive oil in Italy, The Times finds that in a report to the Department of State, the American Consul at Leghorn recently gave some interesting particulars in regard to the business of adulterating olive oils. He shows that large quantities of Tuscan oils are adulturated with oil of a lower grade from other parts of Italy. Not all the oil that is made is from the olives of a desirable quality, much of it being rank and nauseous to the taste. He shows also that there is much adulteration of olive oil with seed oil, chiefly cotton seed, as being the cheapest of all. When even common olive oil by certain buyers is thought too dear, then a step lower leads to the adulteration of common olive oil with seed oil. But the test of quality—the palate and smell—is also the test of purity of an olive oil Intended for the table. It does not pay to adulterate fine Lucca oil, for the quality would be ruined and the mixture would acquire the taste of the cotton-seed oil, or other adulterant as far removed from that of fine Lucca oil, as, in fact, sweet cream is from rank tallow. This will explain what is an undeniable fact cream is from rank tallow. This will explain what is an undeniable fact—that no really fine Lucca oil is ever, under any circumstances, anything but strictly pure oilve oil. strictly pure olive oil. The cheapest kind of olive oil (common olive oil) is the only kind that is ever adulterated, its original quality being so bad that any further deterioration becomes a matter of impossibility.

Unfortunately it appears that the United States has become a favorite dumping ground for this cheap quality of oil, probably owing to the fact that Americans are not an oil-consuming nation and are generally not very good judges of the article. In regard to fraudulent packing of Italian oil for the purpose of deceiving the purchaser the Consul says:

"In this connection, it may be observed that a practice prevails to a considerable extent of passing off on the public fictitious brands of oil, by which is meant a brand bearing the name of a firm which has no real existence, but is purely imaginary. If packed abroad, the packer is sure to be some petty, obscure firm, for no firm of good standing will sink its name and reputation in this way and appear under a false name. But it may, possibly, even be a scheme entirely concocted in the United States. The system is nothing else than a sham and fraud upon the public, and deserves not only exposure, but should be wiped out. It has its origin in the desire of certain dealers or jobbers to have a brand of their own, which they alone can handle and control, and thereby enable them to make an extra profit. The endeavor is invariably made to humbug the public into the belief that such particular brand is something choice, grown and packed exclusively for the firm in question, but the whole thing in reality is a delusion."

As the olive industry of California increases in importance it will become

As the olive industry of California increases in importance it will become more and more necessary for growers to exercise vigilance in seeing that the law against dealing in adulterated compounds is enforced, hands in the correct position for swimming or performing other athletic exercises.

Mr. Vanderbilt intended to go for a week to the Hot Springs of Virginia and then return to New York to have the operation performed. The progress of the trouble is so slow, however, that it has now been decided that he can wait until the Newport season is past before submitting himself to the surgeons. The operation is one that will cause him considerable inconvenience and will make him abandon active life for a time, because his hands will be kept in splints for six or seven weeks after it.

The immediate cause of his trouble is contraction of the flexor tendons, which pull the fingers toward the palm, but from what this arises it is difficult to say.

The usual cause of the contraction is an inflammation of some sort, which may arise from rheumatism, gout, a wound or some injury or disease. In the case of a millonaire, gout is the disease to which one naturally looks.

This ailment, which is not common in America, is due to the overloading of the stomach with rich foods in too great a quantity to be assimilated by the system. The undigested food passes into the blood. If it is eliminated in some way, it is deposited in the form of urates of soda around the fendons, the joints and places where the circulation is slowest. Lack of physical exercise helps to produce this result.

A Disraeli Mystery.

(The Jewish Chronicle:) Every now and then there crops up in the newspapers-especially those of the "Notes and Queries" type—an inquiry with regard to the identity of a certain Benjamin Disraell, who lived in Dublin during the latter years of the last and the early years of the present centuries. Some curios particulars of this gentleman's transactions as a lottery-ticket vender have lately been published—not for the first time—by the Irish Times. This Benjamin Disraell, who is said by T. P. O'Connor to have been an uncle of Lord Beaconsfeld, was a public notary, lottery-office keeper and member of the Dublin Stock Exchange. He lived at No. 105 Grafton street, Dublin, and seems to have made a fortune early in life, for he retired from business before 1811, built himself a fine residence at Beechey Park, County Carlow, and was High Sheriff of the county when he died, aged 48, in 1814. If the exact date of his birth was known, the legend of his relationship to his namesake, Lord Beaconsfeld, could be tested. The facts, so far as they are known, are not unfavorable to Mr. O'Connor's theory. Benjamin Disraell, the grandfather of Lord Beaconsfeld, married his second wife, Sarah Villareal de Seyprut, on May 28, 1765. By this marriage he had a son, Isaac, the author of 'Curiosities of Literature,' who was born in May, 1766. There is no record of any other son of Benjamin Disraell, but it is not a little curious to notice that if he had a second son, say in May, 1767, the date would agree with the record on the Dublin Disraell's tombstone that he was 48—or rather in his forty-eighth year—in August, 1814. On the other hand, it is strange that there is no record of his birth in the Bevis Marks registers, where the birth of Isaac Disraeli in 1766 is duly recorded. It is also to be noted that at the time of his death Benjamin Disraell the elder was still alive—he died in 1816—and it is not customary among Jews to name children after a living grandfather. The custom is not very strictly observed at the present day, but a ce IT IS A LAUDABLE DESIRE IN EVERY man to possess a vigorous manhood. The "loof" of Annam, the coin first mentioned above, is believed to be the largest and most valuable piece ever coined in the history of the world, excepting, of course (as far as value is concerned,) the different gold coins of smaller denominations which have sold at enormous prices on account of scarcity or on account of historical associations. JUSTICE COURT DECIDES A WIFE'S LIABILITY FOR A HUSBAND.

Livingstone Suing His Wife for Supcovering from His Burns.

PASADENA, Aug. 18 .- (Regular Cor respondence.) The liability of a wife for the support of her husband, when she has property and he has none, has been decided upon, so far as a justice court can decide such a weighty mat-ter, and one upon which there has heretofore been no decision. The briefs heretofore been no decision. The oriels in the case, filed by G. A. Gibbs of this city for the plaintiff, and W. I. Johnson for the defendant, form most interesting reading, in that all of the points pro and con are discussed. Mr. Gibbs defined the meaning of the word "support" and cited authorities to prove that whereas the common law that whereas the common law prove that whereas the common law holds that where a husband neglects to suitably provide his wife with the to suitably provide his wife with the necessities of life, a third person may do so and recover for the same. He also cited the California law which makes all of the obligations of the common faw in reference to the support of a wife, apply also to the support of, a husband, when he is unable to support himself, and has not deserted his wife. Mr. Johnson denied that such an obligation was mutual, and mentioned the fact that while claiming not to have deserted his wife he nevertheless had applied for a divorce wirich suit was withdrawn by Mr. Gibbs. In reply, Mr. Gibbs stated that if Mr. Livingstone were divorced from his wife, he would no longer be her husband, and she would therefore be under no obligation to support him from her separate property, therefore the suit was withdrawn. It is possible that a suit will soon be instituted by Mr. Livingstone, who, it will be remembered, is 83 years of age, for divorce from his wife, who, it will be remembered, is 83 years of age, for divorce from his wife, who, it will the same time sue for sufficient allimony sto support him. There has been much interest expressed in the outcome of this case, as it is peculiar in the history of jurisprudence.

the Southern reaches claimed that both went together, as the road could not be operated without a telegraph line.

Now comes a checkmating maneuver that, for the present, at least, puts Mr. O'Connor in the background. The City Trustees yesterday granted a temporary franchise for twenty-three months, in accordance with a request of the Southern Pacific people, along the east side of White avenue, for some fifteen hundred feet or more, thus abutting the property of R. F. House and others, instead of O'Connor's. They also granted a franchise for the telegraph line throughout the city along the route of the railroad. This being done, the company put a force at work setting stakes, Monday afternoon, and sent up a large crew to commence work on the gap. This morning, Mr. O'Connor, it is said, pulled up the stakes, but being informed that the City Superintendent of Streets had been ordered to grade up White avenue, and put it in passable condition, he found himself in the "nine hole" for the time, at least. In the mean while his attorney, Judge P. C. Tonner, has gone to Los Angeles to take legal proceedings, and during his absence work on the temporary franchise line is being pushed for all there is in it. The public will expectantly await the outcome, and "see what they'll see."

VENTURA REPUBLICANS.

UNPARALLELED ENTHUSIASM AT THE COUNTY CONVENTION

Republicans—Judge Williams is Nominated for a Third Term-St.

VENTURA, Aug. 18.—(Regular Correspondence.) The Republican County Convention held in this city today, if it proved nothing else, proved conclusively that the name of William Mc-Kinley of Ohio is nearer to the hearts of the common people than has been the name of any other leader in the history of the Republican party with the possible exception of Abraham Lincoln. At every reference to McKin-ley's name the convention and the gallery broke into spontaneous applause which would not be downed. When his picture was placed on the platform, round after round of cheers resulted which the chairman found it difficult to repress to the end that the work to repress to the end that the work of the convention might be continued. Never in the history of the party in Ventura county has a more wildly enthusiastic convention assembled. The work in hand was a secondary consideration, and the fact was largely in evidence that the farmer is alive to the issues of the hour, and that sound money and protection to American industries will sweep the country next November.

issues of the hour, and that sound money and protection to American industries will sweep the country next November.

Owing to purely local conditions the make-up of the convention was, so to speak, new. W. H. Barnes, who has champloned the candidacy of Judge B. T. Williams and M. F. D. Todd, the two principal winners of convention honors, inaugurated the principle that new blood should be injected, and as a result an entirely new set of men were returned as delegates. The old war horses were replaced by men new to Ventura county conventions, and fully two-thirds of the delegates were young men, a fact very generally remarked upon. The A.P.A. was fully represented, and what was lacking in age was made up in enthusiasm. The best of feeling prevailed and only one contest was in the least degree exciting. For members of Assembly to represent the Sixty-ninth District but two names were mentioned, Peter Bennett who sought to succeed himself, and M. D. F. Todd, who had the solid support of the Santa Paula delegation, representing the A.P.A. sentiment in the county, which is strong. The fight for the nomination between the two candidates named was close and bitterly contested, resulting in the defeat of Bennett by a vote, of 40 to 35 with two scattering votes.

Senator Orestes Orr made a strong appeal for Mr. Bennett whose record as a legislator was above reproach. He pointed to the fact that he had fulfilled every pledge he had made, and that his only fault, if fault it could be called, was in voting against the agricultural district apppropriations, which excluded Hueneme from a share of the State fund. Hueneme voted her six votes against him and in consequence he was defeated.

As was outlined in The Times in advance of the convention, Judge B. T. Williams was nominated for a third term by acclamation. Dr. Kelsey of Santa Paula making the nominating speech, and W. H. Barnes and T. H. Merry acting as seconds. Judge Williams thanked the convention for the horor conferred, and the routine work proceeded.

ing of the resolutions evoked long con-tinued applause. Those sections in which the names of McKinley and Senator Perkins were mentioned brought out all of the latent enthu-siasm of the delegates and galleries which were out in force. The resolu-tions were as follows: THE RESOLUTIONS.

"We indorse the nomination of William McKinley for President, and Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey for Vice-President of the United States. "We affirm our adherence to the doc-trines and principles of the Republican party as enunciated and set forth in the St. Louis platform and invite all patriotic citizens, irrespective of former party affiliations, to join with patriotic citizens, irrespective of former party affiliations, to join with us in defeating an attempt to plunge this community into financial distress and national dishonor.

"We approve refunding the indebtedness of the Pacific railroads, and heartily aprove the action of Hon. George C. Perkins, our United States Senator, in relation thereto, and do hereby recommend and instruct our Legislative nominees to use all honorable means to secure his recilection to the United States Senate.

"We favor the adoption of the amendment to our State Constitution giving equal suffrage to all citizens without regard to sex."

The following named delegates were elected to represent Ventura county in the District Senatorial Convention to be held jointly with Santa Barbara: C. B. Greenwell, Hueneme; J. P. Rassmussen, Ventura; N. O. Say, Santa Paula; B. W. Dudley, Mound; W. H. Barnes, Ojai, and J. S. Collins and M. Atmore, as delegates-at-large. In this connection a resolution, reading as follows, was introduced by W. H. Barnes:

THE UNIT RULE.

"Be it resolved, that it is the sense of this convention that our delegates to the Thirty-fifth Senatorial District Conthe Thirty-fifth Senatorial District Convention act as a unit, and that if they deem it for the best interests of our party in this district that the nominee for the State Senate should come from Ventura county, they are instructed to cast their vote for Lewis W. Andrews." The vote for Representative of the Sixty-ninth Assembly District resulted: M. D. F. Todd, 40; Peter Bennett, 35; scattering, 2.

ing to build up his health by a residence at Burbank, was introduced to the convention, and spoke upon "City Evangelization." Among the things needed to insure successful work in cities are union in unselfishness and faith and the preaching of an unchanged and full gospel. Work is simply paralyzed in the cities when churches are so selfish that they seek to pull down each other. They must unite or be charged with a failure to enter the open doors of the city. Examples were given of how concerted action had accomplished victories, while others by bickerings and rivalries and unchristian words and deeds against each other had done practically nothing. It is very well to have a costly church and hired singers, but better far to have brotherly love and the gospel preached to all. These were some of the thoughts advanced.

A SICK PUGULIST. "Jim" Jeffries is Seriously Ill in San Francisco. The following from Monday's San Francisco Chronicle will be read .:ith regret by the sporting fraternity of this city:

this city:

"J. J. Jeffrles, the promising pugilist who was picked by various sporting authorities to be the prospective champion of the world, is still lying upon a sick bed at his training quarters on the beach, suffering from an attack of acute pneumonia.

"In the first stages of his illness Jeffrles neglected himself and now it is a matter of life and death with him. The first indication of the pulmonary trouble showed itself on Thursday last, but Jeffrles, imagining that it was nothing but a slight cold, merely applied some home remedies. But his condition rapidly grew worse and when Dr. William D. McCarthy was called in he found his patient with all the symptoms of quick pneumonia.

"After passing a very bad night Saturday, another physician was summoned in conjunction with Dr. McCarthy. Their patient yesterday morning was in a very high fever, with a pulse beating between 90 and 100. In three days the disease has altered the herculean pugilist to such a degree that he looks another person. Saturday he did not sleep day or night. His condition late last night was somewhat improved, but he is yet very dangerously ill. One of his lungs is entirely congested and he occasionally coughs up blood. Dr. McCarthy said last night that the young fighter will be fortunate if he recovers from the attack."

OPENED A LETTER.

Accused of Prying into a Priest's

Johnson, alias C. Jansen, gave the $250 bond yesterday afternoon which secured his release from jail. Johnson was arested upon a warrant issued in El Paso, Tex., the complaint upon which it was founded alleging that he had made himself too familiar with the personal affairs of a priest named C. A. Birger, or Burger, even to the extent of opening and reading a letter which was addressed to the reverend gentleman, whose operations in Los Angeles have been before described.

It is believed by some that the arrest of Johnson is a piece of mere spite-work, especially as Birger is said to bear none too spotiess a reputation, both in this city and in other places. It is claimed that he has obtained several considerable sums of money in Los Angeles alone, through the vigorous exercise of his priestly functions among the superstitious.
